Grits lose ground to Tories in Ontario

TORONTO (CP) — Two polls taken 12 days apart within the last two weeks in Toronto suggest that while the Liberals maintain a large lead over the Progressive Conservatives for the Feb. 18 election, their support is slipping, professional pollster Peter Regenstreif says in a copyright story in today's Star.

The first survey, a sample of 608 personal interviews between Jan. 16 and 19, gave the Liberals a 31-percentage-point lead over the Conservatives. The second, a sample of 512 others by telephone last Wednesday, showed their lead at 13 points. Both polls were conducted by the Gallup organization.

Fifty-two per cent of those questioned in the first poll said they would vote Liberal, 21 per cent Conservative, 17 per cent NDP and one per cent other parties. Five per cent were undecided and four per cent had no preference.

The second gives the Liberals 36 per cent, the Tories 23 per cent, the NDP 18, others less than one per cent. Fifteen per cent were undecided and seven per cent had no preference.

Some of the changes could reflect the fact that the second poll was done by telephone, Regenstreif said, which tends to increase the percentage of undecided voters compared to personal interviewing.

The Star said it commissioned the second survey because voters may have been influenced by events such as Prime Minister Clark's reaction to U.S. President Carter's proposed Olympic boycott and Canada's involvement in aiding the escape of six Americans from Tehran.

The second survey found that 92.6 per cent had heard of the escape. Twenty-four per cent said their opinion of Clark had gone up as a result of the action, seven per cent said it had gone down, 57.2 per cent said it was unchanged and 4.3 per cent did not know.

Asked if the Iranian incident "influenced the way you plan to vote or not," 6.6 per cent said yes, 79.7 per cent said no, 6.3 per cent did not know and 7.4 per cent were not aware of the incident.

At the same time as the first poll in Toronto, another sample of 631 personal interviews was taken in the 22 ridings from Oshawa, around Toronto, through Hamilton and the Niagara Peninsula.

That survey showed the Liberals ahead of the Conservatives 41 per cent to 31 per cent. The NDP had 21 per cent while other parties had less than one per cent. Three per cent were undecided and four per cent refused to state a preference.

The samples of 608 and 631 are said to be accurate to within four points either way, 19 times out of 20. The sample of 512 is accurate to within 4½ points, 19 times out of 20.

Scenario of an oil war

Secret study sees N-arms

By RICHARD BURT
New York Times

WASHINGTON — A secret U.S. Defence Department report on the military situation in the Persian Gulf region has concluded American forces could not stop a Soviet thrust into northern Iran and that the United States should thus consider using "tactical" nuclear weapons in any conflict there.

At the same time, the report also concludes that the United States could possibly handle Soviet threats to oil tankers in the area and might also be able to match any effort by Moscow to move forces into Saudi Arabia.

The Pentagon report, entitled Capabilities in the Persian Gulf, was described by officials as the most extensive military study of the region ever done by the government. Completed after the revolution in Iran but prior to the Soviet move into Afghanistan late last year, the report examines the capacity of the United States to respond to a number of potential contingencies, including a Soviet attack on Iran; an attempt by Moscow to bomb major oil facilities in the Persian Gulf and a Soviet submarine campaign against Western oil tankers in the Indian Ocean.

The 70-page report was commissioned by Secretary of Defence Harold Brown almost two years ago, after an inter-agency study concluded that the Persian Gulf was the most likely flash-point for a confrontation between Moscow and Washington. It was prepared by military officers as well as civilian analysts in the office of the secretary of defence and is said to have laid the groundwork for the administration's current effort to bolster local defences and the presence of American forces in the region.

(In Washington today, Pentagon spokesman Thomas Ross refused to comment on the Times' story or to say whether Brown had commissioned such a report as that described by The Times.

(However, Pentagon officials who said they were familiar with the the report but not its exact details described the study as one of a number of such staff reports and studies.)

After stating that Moscow's control of Persian Gulf oil would "destroy NATO and the American-Japanese alliance without recourse to war by the Soviets," the report lists the large forces available to the Soviet Union to the north of the region in the North Causasus, Transcausasus and Turkestan military districts: 23 mechanized divisions, consisting of about 200,000 troops; 70 tactical fighters, including 35 advanced Fencer fighter-

2 sailors seeking asylum

VANCOUVER (CP) — Two Russians seeking political asylum in Canada were hiding in an undisclosed downtown hotel Friday night while the ship they were supposed to board left port at Campbell River.

An immigration official said the Russian freighter Alexander Serfimovich, which was taking on pulp at a mill just north of the east Vancouver Island community, was headed for international waters. Its destination was not immediately known.

The pair, a man and a woman, flew to Vancouver from an undisclosed Russian point Friday and were to travel to Campbell River to relieve members of the Russian freighter's crew.

However, they decided not to show up and were being harbored by a city lawyer.

Delegation to Iran?

TEHRAN (CP) — Moslem militants holding 50 Americans at the U.S. embassy in Tehran announced today a special American delegation would arrive in the capital next week to be briefed on Iranian grievances against the United States and the deposed Shah. The surprise announcement said the delegation was coming to Tehran at the invitation of the militants.

Punxsutawney Phil saw his shadow — in the spot lights

Long winter unclear

Underground News Services

PUNXSUTAWNEY, Pa. — Punxsutawney Phil, Pennsylvania's famous groundhog, saw his shadow today and thus predicted six more weeks of winter.

But he was the only one in North America to bestir himself in a bid to confound the meteorologists.

The fat and furry creature was prodded from his sanctum at 7:29 a.m. and after a moment of sleepy-eyed confusion conferred with members of the Punxsutawney Groundhog Club at his home on Gobbler's Knob. About 1,500 people turned out for the annual affair.

Punxsutawney owes whatever reputation the town has to Phil's annual appearances, of which this year's was the 93rd.

However, in Marion, Ohio, a challenger to Phil's throne — Buckeye Chuck — slept in as a freezing, overcast dawn arrived, which was interpreted as spring being just around the corner.

In West Orange, N.J., Chuck, a female forecaster, came out of her burrow for a scant 15 seconds at the Turtle Back Zoo and decided there would be an early spring.

And in New York, it was too cold this morning for Flushing Park zoo's Pothole Pete so he decided to sleep through it and leave the weather forecasting to others.

Canada plans retaliation

Times News Services

OTTAWA — The federal government will retaliate against the Soviet Union for the expulsion of Canada's senior military attache in Moscow, Col. Harold Gold, an external affairs department spokesman said Friday.

Gold, who is from Victoria, has been ordered out of Moscow just 10 days after three Soviet military officers were accused of spying and ordered out of Canada by External Affairs Minister Flora MacDonald.

Gold was also accused of spying, informed sources said today in Moscow.

The sources said Gold will be leaving within the next two or three days. He was given a week to leave.

The spokesman said Ottawa was planning to retaliate and the government was now considering how this should be done.

Miss MacDonald had promised to retaliate if the Russians responded to the recent expulsion of Soviet officials by ordering Canadian diplomats to leave the Soviet Union.

"Canadian diplomats are not engaged in spying, she said.

This Russian move further chills Soviet-Canadian relations which have cooled sharply since the Soviet invaded Afghanistan.

Prime Minister Clark has announced restrictions on trade with Russia and called for a boycott of the Moscow Olympic Games to protest the Soviet invasion.

New Zealand has also recently expelled the Soviet ambassador to New Zealand and a major Soviet spy case has just erupted in Japan.

Gold, a native of Victoria, was posted to Moscow last August. He was previously in defence department headquarters in Ottawa.

Moscow sources said Canada regarded the charges against the colonel, who

Incompetence charge in ferry row

By CHARLES LA VERTU
The Canadian Press

The Crown-owned B.C. Steamship Corp. has lost a four-year naval battle with the B.C. Ferry Corp., another government-owned firm, over a replacement for the aging Princess Marguerite — and its chief executive officer is furious.

Arthur Elworthy, BCSC president and general manager, said in a Jan. 16 letter marked confidential and obtained by The Canadian Press Friday that ferry corporation general manager Charles Gallagher is not acting in the public interest.

Elworthy says his corporation, which has operated the Princess Marguerite between Seattle and Victoria since 1975, had been promised the Queen of Surrey in 1976 as a replacement vessel.

"Since that time, every minister who has been connected with the ship, plus the board of directors, have recognized this and are unanimous in this regard," the letter addressed to the cabinet committee said.

The cabinet committee announced Thursday the Queen of Surrey would replace the Queen of Prince Rupert on the B.C. Ferry Corp.'s Vancouver Island-Prince Rupert run.

The Prince Rupert then would be leased to the B.C. Steamship Corp. for the Seattle-Victoria run, the committee decided.

The Queen of Surrey, formerly the MS Siena Danica, was purchased by the previous NDP government in 1974 for $17.7 million to ease "the crisis in Vancouver Island-Mainland transportation" while other ships were being built.

Elworthy says that Gallagher has fought to keep the Queen of Surrey "with some kind of an obsession."

"His moves have been thoroughly incompetent. Two years ago he told us we couldn't have the ship because he was going to sell it. He has deceived his board of directors and his minister and, of course, the premier."

The letter says the new run from Port Hardy to Prince Rupert, which begins this year replacing the Kelsey Bay-Prince Rupert run, "is so ill-conceived that it will be rejected by the travelling public."

"I think you will realize that the new concept with the length of the run and the inadequate accommodation for the travelling public will result in its rejection."

Elworthy said the Marguerite brought 180,000 people to Victoria who spent an estimated $20 million, and while it has a debt of $4 million, is not costing the taxpayers anything having made a profit of $250,000 last year after servicing the debt.

The letter notes that since July, at the request of Industry Minister Don Phillips "we have been searching the world for a ship that might suit the Seattle-Victoria route."

bombers and 193 longer-range bombers, including 19 new Backfire aircraft. In addition, the report says that Moscow possesses 103 naval bombers and about 70 submarines that it could commit against American aircraft carriers in the Indian Ocean.

Calling a "sudden seizure" of Iran "the worst case from the U.S. point of view," the report maintains that a move by Moscow might be tempted to exploit the current political turmoil in the country "in order to seize a historical opportunity to change the worldwide balance." It also says that all 23 of the Soviet divisions just north of Iran could be mobilized and moved into northwest Iran in about a month.

While the report notes that Soviet forces opposite Iran are not as well-equipped as units in Eastern Europe, it says "the Iranians will not soon be able to contribute effectively to their own defence." And in the likely contingency that American forces were invited in to bolster Iranian defences, the report discloses that it would take Washington 30 days to get about 20,000 troops and four tactical fighter squadrons, about 72 aircraft, to the country, leaving Moscow with more than a five-to-one advantage in forces.

The only opportunity for stopping a Soviet thrust, the report continues, would be to impede Soviet forces in the rugged terrain along the Soviet border and in the mountains to the southeast. "Unless the mountains can be exploited or substantial assistance can be obtained from allies," it adds, "the Soviets will surely prevail easily because of their large advantage over us in ground forces."

"To prevail in an Iranian scenario," the report concludes that "we might have to threaten or make use of tactical nuclear weapons."

While gloomy about the chances of stopping Soviet forces in Iran, the report is more optimistic about Washington's ability to deal with other threats in the region, particularly any attempt to disrupt oil shipments on tankers leaving the Persian Gulf.

"Until recently," the report says, "it was widely believed that the Soviets could close the sea lanes rather easily through mining and through attacks by submarines and aircraft. However, our analysis indicates that Soviet submarines would have severe problems because of the long distances between the region and their home bases," in the northern Pacific and in the White Sea in the western Soviet Union.

The report estimates that in 30 days, Soviet submarines and bombers could sink about 30 percent of the 550 loaded oil tankers in the sea lanes leading from the Persian Gulf.

The report suggests that a bigger threat to Western oil supplies would be posed by attacks on oil facilities in countries around the Persian Gulf. It says that pipelines and individual oil wells would not be lucrative targets because "oil fields are large and dispersed, access is difficult, and the effects of isolated attacks would not be great economically."

But the report estimates that 65 percent of all Persian Gulf oil passes through only three shipment facilities, Ras Tanura and Juaymah in Saudi Arabia and Khark Island off Iran. "Even limited and unsophisticated attacks would cause serious disruptions" to these facilities.

(But in Moscow, the Soviet Union insisted today it has no intention of interfering with oil fields in the Persian Gulf region or anywhere else in the Middle and Near East.

(The Soviets' emphatic statement, delivered via an authoritative article in the Communist Party newspaper Pravda, said that recent U.S. charges about Russian motivations in the Persian Gulf region "are nothing more than political trickery.") speaks Russian, as unfounded, and believes the measure was taken in retaliation for the expulsion of three Soviet attaches in Ottawa last month.

The attaches were accused of spying against the United States, but the Soviet embassy denied the charges.

The sources said Canada's ambassador in Moscow, Robert Ford, was called to the Soviet foreign ministry last Wednesday to be told of the expulsion order against the colonel.

In February, 1978, the then government of Pierre Trudeau expelled 11 Soviet officials, mainly diplomats, and barred the return to Canada of two others who were abroad at the time.

Gold was born and raised in Victoria, the son of a Ukrainian farmer who settled here before the First World War.

A graduate of Mount View high school, Gold has spent 30 years in the Canadian Air Force. He started in the meteorology branch and then became an air traffic control officer before going on and achieving his commission as an officer.

Married to a former Victorian, Vera Sager (the couple has two grown-up children living in Ottawa), Gold was stationed in Germany for a time in the 60s but most of his service has been at national headquarters in Ottawa.

An older brother, Alfred, who lives at 1560 Morley, said in an interview today he was shocked and surprised by the Soviet's accusation.

He last saw Harold about a year and a half ago.

"He and Vera were just going to take a course in Russian . . . they were looking forward to the posting."

Gold was to have spent two years in Moscow as military attache to the Canadian embassies there and in Finland.

Alfred Gold said his brother has never told him what he does. "It's all pretty confidential stuff."

He described him as "real smart . . . he's always taking courses; he never stops learning. I'd call him a work-aholic."

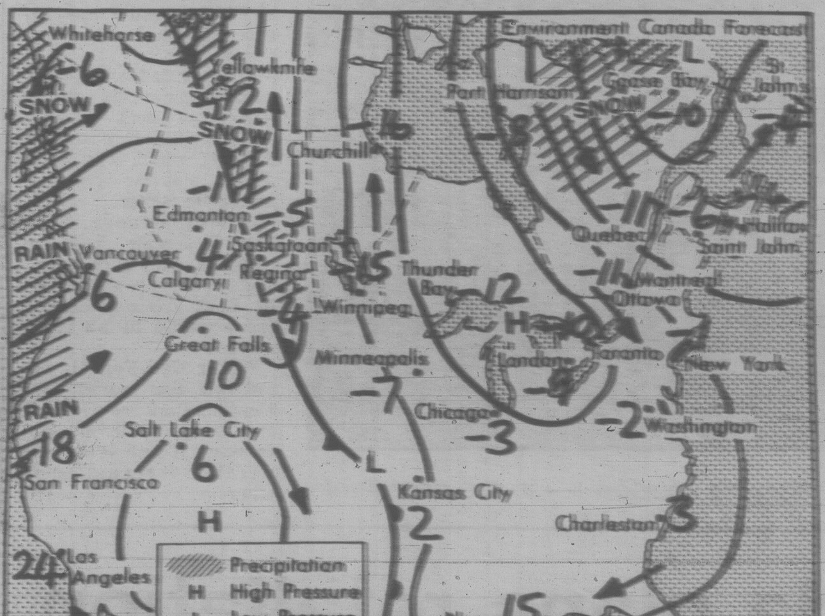
the weather



Map valid until noon Sunday

The province remains under a moist southwesterly flow of milder air for the next few days. Weather conditions will remain unsettled as Pacific disturbances are readily formed in this flow. Presently a vigorous system is just offshore bringing strong gusty winds and rain to the coast. The rain will give way to showers this afternoon as the system moves further inland. Interior regions will receive snow ahead off the disturbance and snowflurries will linger behind the disturbance. Overnight temperatures remained quite mild along the coast ranging from 6 to 9 degrees.

Phone call brought end to monotony of scrabble

OTTAWA (CP) — An anonymous telephone call broke the tedium of hiding for six Americans in Tehran, forcing them and their Canadian hosts to risk this week's daring and successful flight from Iran.

Ken Taylor, Canadian ambassador to Iran, told a news conference Friday someone telephoned his wife Pat about Jan. 19 and "insisted on speaking to Mr. and Mrs. (Joseph) Stafford," two American diplomats hiding in the Taylor home.

The caller, who had no definable accent, refused to be identified but he made clear he was aware of the hidden people.

"During that period, I started with the assumption that all phone calls were menacing," said the graying, tousle-haired diplomat.

That galvanized the escape plan for the Americans which ended with the departure of the six United States diplomats and their Canadian hosts and the closing of the Canadian Embassy in Tehran last Monday.

Taylor, an engaging, smiling man, made light of the tense wait for the right moment to whisk the Americans out of Iran. The refugees found the days long — "some of our carpets are a bit thread-bare from pacing back and forth," he said.

"But they were in remarkably good spirits," he said, despite being confined indoors almost all the time. He praised them for their character.

Why did they choose the Canadian Embassy over other friendly embassies for refuge?

"Maybe they thought the food was better there," joked Taylor.

While acknowledging there were difficult days for everybody, especially the six Americans, he stressed there was an over-riding confidence the caper could be pulled off.

He never did confirm whether the food served at Canadian residences was better than what other embassies might have offered, but he did describe in some detail how the Americans survived their virtual isolation from the outside world.

He said the United States could now boast that it has some of the best-read foreign officers in the world and that all of them could take a shot at the world championship scrabble title.

The 45-year-old Taylor, whose posting to Iran was his first ambassadorship, said the Americans were housed in several Canadian residences during their period of confinement and only went outside when "absolutely necessary."

One unexpected complication occurred when some were forced to leave one of the residences because the landlord decided to put it up for sale.

Taylor said the Americans stayed in homes of Canadian diplomats, occasionally moving to escape detection. None entered the embassy office building.

Taylor discounted claims the Canadian escapade he master-minded will delay release of the remaining 50 American hostages being held by militant Iranian students in the U.S. Embassy in Tehran.

He said he shares the "general feeling of optimism" about chances of a settlement following conciliatory remarks by the Iranian president-elect, Abolhassan Bani-Sadr.

Taylor, whose wife Pat sat beside him, responded fully to most questions but refused to discuss details of the forged visas and passports given to the six Americans. That, he said, is a "trade secret."

The ambassador, who has been hailed in Canada and the U.S. for saving the American diplomats, chatted privately with Prime Minister Clark after a picture-taking session Friday evening.

The Iranian authorities never asked him if he was hiding Americans, he said. But that may simply have been "benign neglect" on the part of the authorities.

The six Americans escaped the U.S. Embassy when the students seized it Nov. 4. Five of them were taken under the wing of the Canadian Embassy Nov. 10 and the sixth came in Nov. 22.

Maple leaves flutter in D.C.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The six U.S. diplomats who eluded capture by Iranian militants in Tehran last November were able to flee to safety because all worked some distance from the U.S. chancery where the main attack occurred.

The six, all wearing a Canadian maple leaf or flag pin, stood smiling on a raised platform in the state department lobby as hundreds of foreign service officers, clerks and secretaries cheered and whistled on their arrival.

One of the first things the diplomats did when they met the president after the news conference was to present him with a tiny red-enamelled maple leaf. He quickly pinned it to his suit lapel, commenting that like them he is extremely grateful to the Canadians "who helped them so much in a courageous way."

The loudest cheer of all at the reception was reserved for a heretofore anonymous foreign diplomat. Responding modestly to the outpouring of affection, Canadian chargé d'affaires Gilles Mathieu said of his country's role, "It was the normal and just the right thing to do."

Greece offers permanent site for Olympics

ATHENS (Reuter) — Greece called today for the permanent return of the Olympic Games to their ancient birthplace to free them from political and commercial exploitation.

Prime Minister Constantine Caramanlis said in a letter to Lord Killanin, president of the International Olympic Committee, that recent developments have jeopardized the fate of the Games.

In his letter, sent through the Greek Olympic Committee, Caramanlis proposed that the games should be held in their ancient cradle in the olive groves of ancient Olympia in western Peloponnese.

In an apparent reference to President Carter's call for a boycott of the Moscow Olympics because of the Soviet intervention in Afghanistan, Caramanlis said recent events are transforming the Games from a fact of peace into a factor of world tension.

"Political, racial and ideological conflicts are rekindled every time the choice of a site for the Games arises as, at present, with the Games planned for Moscow," the prime minister said.

Caramanlis said the Games need a permanent home and Greece would be the most suitable location.

President Carter, meanwhile, assured U.S. athletes Friday they will have an opportunity to compete in counter-Olympics if the official Moscow Games go on as scheduled.

But as he spoke, the Olympic committees of 10 Western European countries and Egypt issued a comminique in Frankfurt, West Germany, endorsing participation at the Moscow Olympics.

The stand of the Egyptian and Western European committees, in many cases at odds with that of their governments, stated pointedly that it is the committees which have the authority under the Olympic Charter to decide whether they participate.

Besides Egypt, those representated at the Frankfurt meeting were the committees of West Germany, Italy, Belgium, Norway, Luxembourg, the Netherlands, Britain, Denmark, Switzerland and Spain.

In his speech to the U.S. National Conference on Physical Fitness for All, Carter said the Soviet Union's invasion of Afghanistan and installation of a puppet government is not mere politics. "It's aggression, pure and simple," he said.

However, Carter said he remains determined that Olympians who don't go to Moscow "will have an opportunity this year to participate in athletic games of the highest calibre."

Carter's stand was given a lift when President Daniel Arap Moi of Kenya, home of some of the world's greatest distance runners, today told Kenyan athletes not to go to the Moscow Olympics if the site for the games could not be changed.

"It is my very strong view that it would be most inappropriate for any non-aligned nation to attend the Moscow Olympics while Soviet troops are in Afghanistan in contravention of the basic principle of territorial integrity," he said in a statement.

Half a ship

Newspapers, local politicans, residents and tourists could have talked up the merits of the Princess Marguerite until they were blue in the face. The provincial cabinet — the real board of directors of the B.C. Steamship Corporation — was determined not to eat crow.

In announcing that the smaller Queen of Princess Rupert will replace the Marguerite on the vital tourist link between Victoria and Seattle, the provincial government has shown just how stubborn it can be. The fact that it may well be creating more problems for the Victoria tourist industry than it is solving was of little consequence, given an overriding political consideration of appearing to be consistent.

The cabinet has played an option that must have been low on the list of alternatives.

There is no doubt the Queen of Princess Rupert is an excellent vessel for the role she was designed to play on the B.C. coast. Since being launched in 1965 she has provided a vital link for both British Columbians and tourists between Vancouver Island and Prince Rupert.

When the B.C. Ferry Corporation decided to retire her from the run in favor of the larger and faster Queen of Surrey, it committed her to a future as the ferry link between the Queen Charlotte Islands and Prince Rupert — a run that would make good use of her ocean-going capabilities.

Dollar for dollar the Rupert will generate more tourist business here in the south simply because of passenger volumes. But that should not detract from the government's social responsibility to providing at least minimum service to the north.

Finance Minister Hugh Curtis says the Rupert will only work the southern route for one year before going back north. However that doesn't make a lot of sense if the vessel is to be modified to boost her carrying capacity from 400 to 800 people. Will she be remodelled, with cabin accommodation re-installed, for the 20-hour trip between the mainland and the Charlottes?

Naturally most Victoria businessmen are pleased that there will be a vessel for the Victoria-Seattle run. The uncertainty caused by government dilly-dalling over whether to charter, build or refit created much anxiety.

However, in breathing a sigh of relief, they should not overlook the fact that Rupert, even modified and making two runs a day, will not make up the loading capacity of the Princess Marguerite. At a time when Victoria is trying to expand its tourist trade, it is delivered a vessel that allows no room for expansion in 1980.

But there are also other considerations. Tourist promoters doubt a night time sailing will be enthusiastically received by visitors, thus further cutting the number of visitors. The Marguerite's major attraction was that it allowed people to board in Seattle, spend most of the day in Victoria, and return to Seattle in the evening.

Obviously the Rupert was not the province's first choice as a replacement for the Marguerite. The fate of both vessels was known last fall, before a shopping trip was made to Europe to try to find a replacement for the Marguerite. It can only be hoped that if as Curtis says, the Rupert is a stop-gap measure, the government will hustle this summer to either find or build a suitable vessel for the Seattle-Victoria run.

Memorial to confused values

By COLIN PARTRIDGE

Two days before Christmas one of my former students was killed in a car crash. She was driving home to spend Christmas with her parents. She had graduated from UVic in 1974 and then taken courses in education and child care at UBC. She was 28 years old, unmarried, a part-time substitute teacher and member of a sectarian commune.

Since her graduation she had kept in touch with me, writing about her hopes, disappointments and current commitments. Piecing together the correspondence, I find a simple but complex person whose life represents some of the confused values of the past two decades. Entering the 1980s, it is sobering to reflect on the mixed values we are now inheriting.

Materialism shunned

She had a happy upbringing and devoted, prosperous parents. Then, at the age of 18, she rebelled against the materialism she saw in the older generations and among her own peer-group. She wanted a life dedicated to helping people, rather than exploiting them.

So she planned to teach the underprivileged.

After four years of university, she went north to instruct native children. She carried with her a teaching certificate and her idealism. But these were not enough to survive. She discovered that some school boards demand political manoeuvering or sexual favors if a teacher is to hold down a job; she also learned that some people with local influence prefer that native children stay illiterate rather than acquire a basic education.

She lost her job on grounds of incompetence. Her idealism for teaching diminished. She began to doubt her skills; her self-confidence waned. Her secure childhood had left her unprotected against the harsh politics of survival.

Dismayed and unemployed she joined a commune run by a major North American sect.

At this point she met a former boy-friend and became pregnant by him. She sought advice from the sect's leader who suggested abortion. The hospital board delayed approval; then the medical procedures did not go well, and the fetus was finally delivered by caesarian section.

The sexual and social experience profoundly altered her.

She saw exploitation now in terms of male dominance and became interested in feminist views. She distrusted marriage, which her lover had proposed, and grew to imagine love as something larger than the exchange of interpersonal affection.

Influenced by communal living, she substituted spiritual love for intimate human relations. Like nuns of previous ages, she chose some imaginary Heavenly Bridegroom rather than a human husband.

Slowly she released herself from close friendships outside the commune. She became totally committed to the sect. But as she grew spiritually more serene, she entered a deepening personal loneliness. She wrote about her lack of intellectual companionship.

Then on 23 Dec. she started to drive home. For an emotionally deprived and lonely person, driving can be a strange companion offering a communion that is found nowhere else.

Life skills

She brought from the 1960s a sense of personal freedom, but was untrained in the skills to use that freedom. She was astonished to find that teaching, sexuality, spiritual commitment and communal living take away freedom and do not always offer meaningful relationships in exchange. They could all become as exploitative as the material world she scorned at the age of 18.

In the fall of 1972, at the first class I taught her, I discussed a story by the Anglo-Welsh writer Caradoc Evans. It was called Be This Her Memorial and told of a woman who had total belief in the spiritual values preferred by a young Christian preacher. To buy him a present, she saved her pennies; she went without food and slowly starved herself to death.

The young woman who died on the icy roads of B.C. this Christmas Eve was comparable in her lonely commitments and total delusions.

Ken Taylor: election ploy

PETERBOROUGH, Ont. — Well gang, it's certainly been a fun week out jetting through the winter skies with Air Arrogance, the chariot designed to restore Pierre Trudeau to the title he feels much easier with, namely Himself.

It's been a week in which it's been made clear that the Tories are running the wrong candidate. Clearly, the man who should be on all those campaign posters is Ken Taylor.

Joe Clark has a good possibility of getting elected — if he lived in the United States. It's a measure of the bad luck that dogs the Conservatives that he happens to reside in Canada.

There's a report that the Canadian consul was on his way to lunch in San Francisco when an American rushed up and kissed him. It can be taken in these special circumstances that it had something to do with international harmony.

Found seats

This is not to suggest that Flora MacDonald is attempting to convert the debonair Mr. Taylor into votes, but anyone who has seen the TV clips of the external affairs minister greeting the returning hero at Ottawa Airport could be forgiven for thinking that she had found 14 Ontario seats in her Christmas pantyhose.

If Mr. Taylor, now known as The Six-American Man, is wise, he'll retreat to the oblivion of The Merv Griffin Show before the Tory strategists have him in a pin-up poster rivaling Bo Derek, a slim man's version of John Crosbie, who was last week's alternative to draw attention away from Joe Clark.

Poor Joe. He couldn't nail down Pierre to attack, so he's taken on the Kremlin instead. Known now among the Rockliffe set as either The Hawk of High River or The Cold War Wimp, he has managed to pull off a political coup unequalled since he expressed his surprise on his first visit to Japan that translation tended to slow down the conversation.

The Trudeaucrats are flouting the charge that the boy from the bush blabbed to everyone about his election ace: Mr. Taylor.

Mr. Himself maintains that the Clark people blubbered their Tehran good news on Boxing Day to one Rodrigue Pageau, who he identified as "president of the Conservative Party."

Among his multifarious gifts, the art of remembering names is not in Mr. Trudeau's quiver. Since no one in press or party had ever heard of the esteemed gentleman, it was finally determined that he is the chief Tory political organizer in Quebec.

If Mr. Pageau, whoever he is, knew about the discovery of Ken Taylor as the sole Tory platform of this election — who didn't?

Well, it turns out that the entire cabinet knew, as of Jan. 4. It turns out that most of the Senate knew, since Tory cabinet ministers in that geriatric ward cautioned other members not to push questioning on the Iran hotbox too forecefully.

It turns out that a good portion of the Rockliffe cocktail crowd knew of the six Americans being harbored by Taylor, and according to the delighted MacDonald, were sidling up to her and asking how her "houseguests" were doing.

What's so clearly infuriated the superior minds of the Liberals is the realization that they were the last to know, after everyone including Quebec gravel-pit dealers were blabbing about it over bowling.

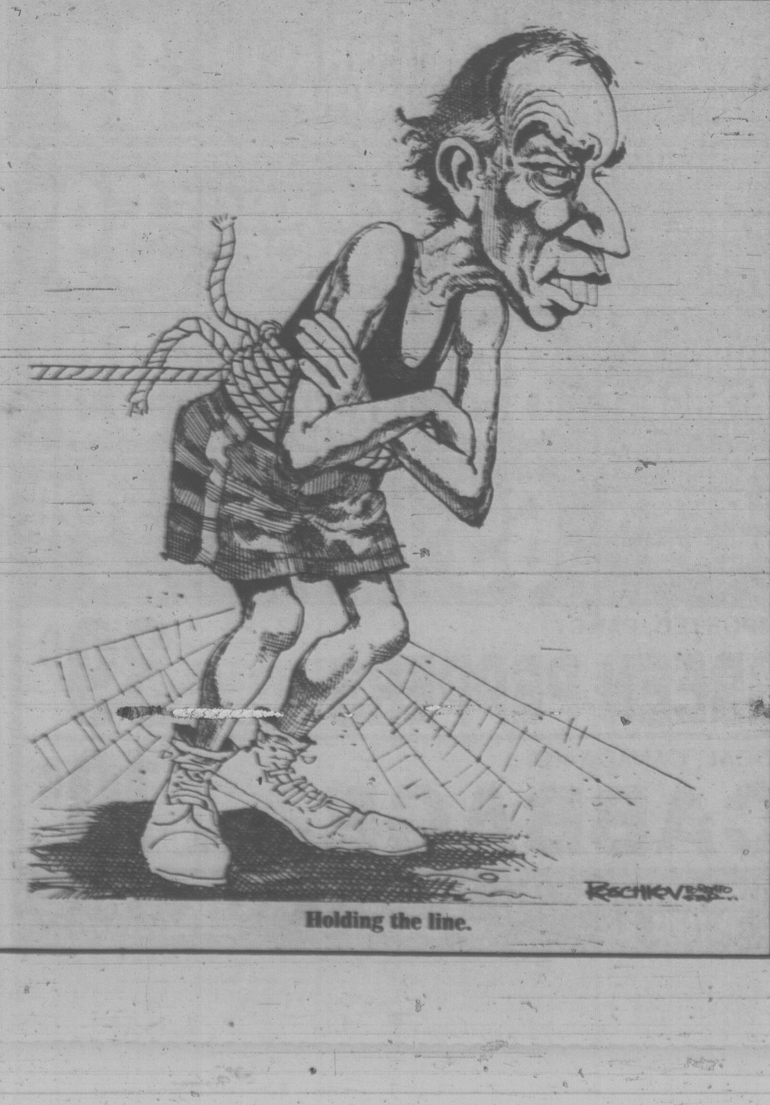
Pride hurt

It's pride, not security that hurt. The thought that there has been a piece of gossip floating about in Ottawa circles that Jim Coutts has not heard about, is not merely treasonous, its unsettling to one's social standing. On such shallow sand does Ottawa politics sit.

As for Mr. Himself, his tedium has been such (aside from his born-again flurry in St. John's) that the 29 reporters who demanded — and got — a news conference are now ordering "Free the St. John's 29" T-shirts.

The man's highlight of the week was when a neophyte and towel-clad reporter on the Sherbrooke Record revealed that she couldn't think what to say when trapped in a sauna with Trudeau because "he sucks the energy" out of everyone he meets.

Anyone who's heard one of his 1980 speeches, in or out of the sauna, knows what she mans.



Holding the line.

Tweed hospitality

Oak Bay citizens have long had a reputation for politeness, for political awareness, for wittiness, and for somewhat . . . well, quaint attitudes. With such a combination is it any wonder that the municipality also has a reputation for putting on the best all-candidates meeting of any election campaign?

It didn't disappoint this week, as the Oak Bay Kiwanis Club hosted the first major all-candidates meeting for Victoria riding of the current federal campaign. (The Victoria riding includes the entire municipality of Oak Bay, even though some political workers, notably those from the NDP, whose candidates traditionally fare abominably there, have been heard to mutter that its unique characteristics really merit it becoming a riding on its own.)

About 150 spectators, question-askers and hecklers turned out for the event. At a rough guess, about two-thirds of them were already committed to the New Democrats and about one-quarter to the Conservatives. The remainder may have been true representatives of the undecided voters, come to have a look at all candidates and parties. (The reader should not, of course, draw any conclusions that these proportions are in any way representative of the population of Oak Bay as a whole; the only possible conclusion is that the NDP did the best in ensuring a good coterie of its supporters turned out to the meeting.)

The undecided had an opportunity to hear four of the five candidates in the riding: sitting MP Conservative Defence Minister Allan McKinnon, New Democrat Robin Blencoe, Liberal Bruce Corbett, and Marxist-Leninist Dorothy Ratzlaff. The only missing representative was the one from the Rhinoceros Party, a disappointment to some of the crowd who thought a rhinoceros would fit well into the Oak Bay scene.

Ratzlaff opened with a lengthy dissertation on the evils of capitalism and the need for a working people's revolution. Only in Oak Bay, a number of spectators commented later, would the audience have sat perfectly still and quiet throughout the speech, and even given a small round of applause afterwards.

Corbett read, rather haltingly, a speech about the Liberals' new energy policy. But he got into trouble with the crowd when he talked about the control of Canada's oil resources by foreign corporations — such as those owned in the U.S. or Britain.

"What's that reference to Britain?" yelled somebody from the back of the hall.

"Britain's not a foreign country," shouted somebody else.

"Let's show a little more respect there," cried a third.

A little nonplussed, Corbett paused. "I'm sorry," he said. "I forgot this was Oak Bay."

McKinnon and Blencoe were obviously the pros in the group, both delivering slick, polished political speeches and handling most of the questions directed their way deftly.

McKinnon did run into a little trouble with a question on nuclear power. After a rather carefully-worded answer, he threw it away with a last line of "I turn on the lights in Ontario every day, and nothing happens."

And Blencoe seemed a little hesitant in dealing with some of the more complex questions of New Democrat economic policy: just how his party would maintain investment in Canada while forcing lower interest rates to investors, for example.

The questions directed at Corbett were mostly concerned with the past performance of the Liberals during their years in government. One woman, indeed, was so little concerned with the candidate as an individual that she had to admit apologetically she had forgotten his name. She called him "Mr. Liberal" every time she addressed him.

Corbett, however, after reminding the audience of his name, had a simple answer to nearly every question: he disagreed with his party's past policies but he was sure their new ones would be better.

One wag was eventually prompted to tell him it was too late for him to change parties now.

Ever polite, the crowd even gave Ratzlaff the opportunity to answer a couple of questions. Had her idealistic socialistic society ever been achieved on earth, asked one spectator.

"Yes," she replied, "in the People's Democratic Republic of Albania." Well, you learn something new every day.

More all-candidates meetings are scheduled for the local ridings during the next two weeks. Even though the style and class of the Oak Bay gathering may not be duplicated, residents should take the opportunity to attend them. Not necessarily for the political knowledge to be learned but purely for the entertainment value. They're much cheaper than spending the evening at a movie.

Draft daughters, too!

BOSTON — My daughter is 11, and as we watch the evening news, she turns to me seriously and says, "I don't like the way the world is doing things." Neither do I.

My daughter is 11 years and eight months old, to be precise, and I do not want her to grow up and be drafted. Neither does she.

My daughter is almost 12, and thinks about unkindness and evil, about slaughtered seals and war. I don't want her to grow up and be brutalized by war — as soldier or civilian.

As I read those sentences over, they seem too mild. What I want to say is that I am horrified by the very idea that she could be sent to fight for fossil fuel or fossilized ideas. What I want to say is that I can imagine no justification for war other than self-defence, and I am scared stiff about who has the power to decide what is "defence."

But now that President Carter has decided on a new round of draft registration, I wonder about something else. Would I feel differently if my daughter were my son? Would I be more accepting, less anguished, at the notion of a son drafted, a son at war?

Would I beat the drums and pin the bars and stars on his uniform with pride? Would I look forward to him being toughened up, be proud of his heroism and accept his risk as a simple fact of life?

I cannot believe it.

So, when I am asked now about registering women for the draft along with men, I have to nod yes reluctantly. I don't want anyone registered, anyone drafted, unless it is a genuine crisis. But if there is a draft, this time it can't just touch our sons, like some civilized plague that leaves daughters alone to produce another generation of warriors.

I know that realistically we will have to register women along with men anyway, because the courts would require it. Women may not have won equal rights yet, but they have "won" equal responsibilities. A male-only draft would surely be challenged and likely ruled unconstitutional.

But at a deeper level, we have to register women along with men because our society requires it.

War has often split couples and sexes apart, into lives built on separate realities. It has been part of the grudge of self-sacrifice, the painful gap of understanding and experience between men's and women's lives. It is the stuff of which alienation and novels are written.

But, perhaps, stripped of its maleness and mystery, its audience and cheerleaders, war can be finally dis-illusioned. Without the last trappings of chivalry, it can be seen for what it is: the last deadly resort.

So, if we must have a draft registration, I would include young women as well as young men. I would include them because they can do the job. I would include them because all women must gain the status to stop as well as to start wars. I would include them because it has been too easy to send men alone.

I would include them because I simply cannot believe that I would feel differently if my daughter were my son.

THE ECONOMIST

The removal of the Olympics from Moscow would be a startling sign to the average man hanging on to an Omsk omnibus that the rest of the world detests the invasion of Afghanistan by the insecure autocrats who are his rulers. It would black out the expensive worldwide television spectacular now being designed (more nationalistically than the 1936 Nazi Olympics) to show him that those autocrats enjoy international legitimacy and acclaim.

But no politician in a free society has a right to rob the teenage girl swimmer from a Liverpool slum who has got out of bed at 6 a.m. for three hours training every morning before work for four years, in preparation for the 56½ seconds when medal-winning might change her whole life (and exhilarate her neighbors, clubmates, maybe millions of her countrymen). The number of people uplifted by the Olympics in most societies is greater than the 2 per cent or so of articulate people passionately interested in politics. That is why politicians should not talk about boycotts as President Carter is doing, but about switching sites.

Those who favor changing sites usually propose the leftover 1972-76 Olympic sites in Montreal or Munich. This suggestion prompts three thoughts: that it would be bad luck on Montreal or Munich; that switching makes sense if but only if it can be made effective; and how to persuade the stuck-in-mud International Olympic Committee (IOC). Given more spine among America's allies, none of these three objections needs be insuperable.

The Olympic games will be watched by over 500 million televiewers, plus about 0.03 per cent of that number of live watchers who will cause accommodation problems in any single city where the games are held. The obvious solution, if there is a switch from Moscow, is to make these 1980 contests the Television Games. Scatter the different sports in different rich and poor sports-mad countries, hook them by television and video-recording into the worldwide audience, arrange flood-lighting times so that they can hit the screens by satellite in the main television-watching areas at convenient leisure hours, concentrate any new subsidies on the extra cost of co-ordinating this television coverage.

Since the Communist teams would still go to Moscow, there would then be two Olympics. The smaller one, presumably that unrecognized by the IOC, might look pretty silly. The IOC at present proclaims that Moscow is religiously obeying the Olympic spirit (what, when Russian dissidents who might spoil the Communist propagandist teleshow are being deported from their Moscow homes?) and that the games are the traditional gathering of the sporting youth of the world in a single city where IOC officials can busily organize everybody (hokum, so let us be unhypocritically clear what a very worthwhile but endangered thing modern Olympics actually are).

The Olympics are the world championships of one major sport (track and field athletics) and of around 20 minor sports that gain greatly from being televised at the same time. This peak-occasion televising introduces sports (e.g. modern gymnastics) to countries previously ignorant of them, and subsequent participation brightens the lives of millions. But the cynosure, track athletics, imminently faces two crises — the advance to honest professionalism, the retreat from drugs.

At present track superstars even in Britain live tolerably comfortably off grants from the Sports Aid Foundation and the taxpayer, but they are not allowed to exploit their full commercial value and are increasingly required to tax-cheat when reporting reimbursement of their "expenses." Since about 100 track athletes worldwide could now easily become rich men (like golf and tennis players) from properly-organized professionalism, this will come in the next four years. The IOC may then wish to pretend that young runners have become millionaires while not breaking Olympic rules through making any money.

But competitive professionalism, unlike shoddy shamateurism, will not always allow the present blind eye to the drug scandal, which was best described in the Daily Mail recently by Derek Johnson, British secretary of the International Athletes Club:

> Like most athletes, I believe that eastern Europe is up to its eyeballs in drugs . . . Of course, drug-taking exists among western athletes, but in eastern Europe the federations are running an organized state drug program for athletes . . . So I'd quite happily have the West dissociate itself from those countries. That doesn't necessarily mean from their athletes . . . But the system of registration (for free-world track meetings) should demand that athletes allow themselves to be drug-tested at any time of the year. If an East German registered and his state made it impossible for him to be tested, he'd just have to content himself with competing only among his drug-ridden colleagues, or move out like Martina Navratilova and others have.

That should suggest some ways forward.

In summary, the worst outcome would be no games for the Liverpool girl; the second worst a feebly NATO-split games in which most countries, especially the black ones, plumped for Moscow. The best outcome would be an Olympics in a Moscow deterred from aggression by other means, and allowing a viable sports festival instead of a tyrants' teleshow (no hope).

As this best is unattainable, move now to an Olympics that are geographically scattered, coterminously televised. Persuade the IOC to relocate from Moscow by telling it that before the 1984 Los Angeles Olympics all civilized countries will demand, by law, drug tests on any visiting competing athletes "for health reasons." The national Olympic associations know that all future Olympics will depend on whether fully professional athletics runs its world championships simultaneously with their minor sports — say there will be encouragement by government tax and other policies only for associations that play 1980 ball elsewhere than in Moscow. In the Television Games of 1980 suggest offers of the hockey competition to Pakistan, the boxing to somewhere locally popular in Africa, the rowing to Yugoslavia, something like the boring unprofessional evening football to Saudi Arabia, the gymnastics to China, but otherwise put each event in whatever willing worldwide stadium usually gets the biggest audience for that particular sport (judo in Japan, etc.).

Let the dithering NATO politicians choose one go-getter who understands what is behind the spluttering Olympic torch to negotiate with the IOC, which is supposed to represent the fastest and fittest youth in the world. At present both sides look incapable of organizing a village egg-and-spoon race.

Letters to the editor

Definite terms

Just after listening to the impressive State of the Union address by President Carter, my thoughts came back to our federal election called after a few months from the day our government was sworn into office and had barely survived two non-confidence motions.

Surely there must be a better way to ensure stability and continuity, both essential to carry on policies whose effectiveness cannot be fairly evaluated unless they are given the necessary time.

Perhaps this "better way" could be that an opposition vote of non-confidence should kill a bill presented to Parliament whether on energy, finances, foreign affairs and so on, without necessarily requiring the calling of the people to the polls. The combined efforts of the opposition could require either substantial amendments to the rejected legislation, or a totally new approach to the problem(s) found unacceptable.

The most valid objection to this "better way" that would allow an elected PM to carry on his four years term of office would be that it may threaten the importance of the party system prevailing in our country. In fact, it is not so, because, according to the spirit and letter of our constitution, the role of the opposition is to counsel, to advise, to assist the government in providing the best possible legislation and to function effectively with the welfare of the country as principal goal.

Perhaps the only valid exception to the four-year term of office should be the physical and mental health of the PM, when it appears absolutely certain that he cannot carry on his duties, but even this should be carefully examined before demanding a resignation. History proves beyond the shadow of a doubt, that a Franklin Delano Roosevelt in a wheelchair can be a more enlightened, powerful, effective leader than a man who can climb a mountain, conquer a ski slope, swim across the English Channel or endure a marathon. — E. I. Lattes, 432-200 Dallas Road.

Steam cars

Recently you had a letter from a reader concerning the Stanley steam car.

In the 1920s I was in India in the RAF and had the job of driving a three-ton Leyland lorry to Patiala from Umbala with gear and kit of the then Prince of Wales on a visit to the Maharajah of Patiala. In the garage there were one or two Stanley steam cars along with Rolls Royce and other expensive cars.

The driver of these cars allowed me to sit in the steam car and drove me a short distance. The heating up of the car only lasted a few minutes (although it might have been recently driven). Owing to the language difficulty, I was unable to really get an idea of its performance, but I was impressed by the quietness of running and the absence of fumes which always show up in a hot climate.

Why the powers that be couldn't have improved on this car I cannot understand? — I. C. Fox, 1148 North Park Street.

Phone fees

The present billing system of our telephone company is based upon a fixed rate and a fee for long distance calls. The time used for phone services is only considered on long distance calls. The cost effect for the customer of this billing system is best illustrated by three examples:

1) The parents live in White Rock. The daughter and her family live in Vancouver. They call each other every second day and talk for 10 minutes, thus totalling 150 minutes a month. These 150 minutes are provided by B.C. Tel without any additional charge since they are executed within a toll free area but still over some 30 kilometres.

2) The parents live in Victoria, the daughter in Richmond. The distance between the participants is 100 km. They communicate per phone the same way as the White Rock parents, that is 150 minutes per month. But one should see the telephone bill. It will amount to $60 — for the same service the White Rock parents get for free.

3) The parent-daughter relation is now between Victoria and Montreal, some 5,000 km. One would think since the distance is 50 times longer the costs are 50 times higher. Not so, they are only $150 — namely 2.5 times higher.

From these three examples follows that the unit cost for calls in Case 1 is zero, in Case 2 it is 40 cents per 100 minute-kilometres and in Case 3 it is two cents per 100 minute-kilometres.

The short long-distance caller pays too large a portion into the telephone company. I would suggest the introduction of a billing system which considers time as the most important parameter for any phone call no matter from where to where.

Some years back one could argue that measuring times spent on phone calls might impose some problems although long distance calls have been timed for quite a while. So why not apply the same rules for local calls and use the computer for some profitable purpose?

Everybody knows that teenagers spend hours on the telephone without paying a single cent. Everybody also knows through TV advertising of the telephone company that elderly people are encouraged to make more use of the long-distance call. The reason is very clear. The long-distance caller keeps the company alive.

The present billing system is unjust and discriminatory. It is outdated and in many parts of the world replaced by systems that consider number of calls, time and to a lesser degree distance as base for computing charges to the customer. — W. Krause, Victoria.

White ensign

I am writing with reference to the article "Unification — Mostly a Flop" which appeared in the Jan. 24 edition of the Times.

Having served for six years as a member of the RCNVR and having taken part in naval action during the Second World War, I have noted with deep interest the statement made by F. O. Willmore "calling for a return to the three services and three separate uniforms." Willmore said morale has been seriously impaired by the loss of identity and tradition and that, unless something is done, there will be nothing on which to build.

Since the loss of identity and tradition is recognized by F. O. Willmore and should the three separate services once again be restored, may I suggest that the traditional White Ensign be flown by naval ships and likewise the service be identified as the Royal Canadian Navy. — J. H. Storrie, 517 Quadra Street.

House prices beat inflation

OTTAWA (CP) — New housing prices rose slowly during 1979, winding up with an increase of five per cent, well below the inflation rate of 9.1 per cent, say Statistics Canada figures.

Land prices increased six per cent while the price of houses rose 4.5 per cent from 1978, up from increases of 5.1 per cent and 2.9 per cent in 1978 from 1977.

The new housing price index, for which 1976 equals 100, stood at 113 in December, 1979.

The index surveys prices in 22 cities.

Alberta booming

EDMONTON (CP) — Alberta contractors did more than $1 billion of business last year and the forecast for 1980 is also "positively charged," said Elver Olsen, new president of the Electrical Contractors Association.

But if the construction boom continued, there could be a shortage of manpower.

"There are enough men and materials available to tackle the unprecedented wave of projects, but if some of the bigger ones start at once it could put a strain on labor," Olsen said in an interview.

Exchanges closing early

TORONTO (UPC) — The Toronto, Montreal and Vancouver stock exchanges will close early on Monday, the first day of 2:30 p.m. EST closings caused by record trading and dollar volumes.

At the Toronto Stock Exchange, the January volumes more than doubled December's and far outstripped last year's levels, said a spokesman.

"Trading has tripled recently and we'll be closing early to alleviate some of that congestion," an MSE spokesman said. "It'll help the computer which has been overloaded."

Mark Foreman, manager of exchange services for the Vancouver Stock Exchange, announded the exchange will close at noon PST (3 p.m. EST) as a courtesy to other Canadian exchanges.

He said the Vancouver exchange was asked to cut back its hours by eastern markets which wanted to close earlier because of heavy volume.

John Kolosky, assistant director of TSE marketing operations, said average daily transactions have nudged 24,000 in January, compared to last year's figures, which hit the 9,950 range, he said.

"Members are putting in many long hours," Kolosky said. "There are no serious problems in coping with volumes and keeping records up to date and capital at proper levels, because of signifcant increase in volume."

However, he said, "We want to make sure no problems develop. One way to make sure that everything is being handled correctly is trying to reduce the workload."

At 30, Larry feels better, not older

By MICHAEL KATZ
New York Times

"I worked hard all my life to get where I am, and suddenly I don't have much time left." — Larry Holmes, on being 30 years old.

LAS VEGAS — Time is of the essence. Still, the oldest heavyweight boxing champion in the world does not hear winged chariots hurrying near, and, after listening to his body, Larry Holmes says he is stronger than ever and "I don't think anybody can beat me this year and not next year, and we'll see about the year after that."

By no means is the World Boxing Council champion thinking, out loud anyway, of retirement. He embarks here Sunday on what he hopes will be a busy 1980 schedule, four or five fights including a September showdown with John Tate, the World Boxing Association's version of a heavyweight champion.

The bout on Sunday, against Lorenzo Zanon, a weak-chinned Italian who is a former European champion, will be the fifth defense of the title that Holmes won from Ken Norton on June 9, 1978.

From May 1976, when Muhammad Ali knocked out Richard Dunn, until Holmes' first defense, against Alfredo Evangelista on Nov. 10, 1978, there was not one knockdown in a heavyweight title bout. Holmes, admittedly not a puncher in the class of an Earnie Shavers or even a Norton, has knocked out all four of his challengers: Evangelista, Osvaldo Ocasio, Mike Weaver and Shavers. What he figures to do to Zanon, whose only two appearances in this country resulted in 1977 knockouts by Norton and Jerry Quarry, could make Don King, the promoter, guilty of a crime premeditated.

There have been 13 first-round knockouts in heavyweight title fights. The quickest work was accomplished by Tommy Burns, who celebrated St. Patrick's Day in 1908 Dublin by stopping one Jem Roche in one minute, 28 seconds. The modern record belongs to George Foreman, who needed only two minutes to dispatch of Joe (King) Roman on Sept. 1, 1973, in Tokyo. Records are made to be broken.

"I don't know how well this guy can take a punch," a relaxed Holmes told a gathering of reporters in his hotel suite this week.

"I'm not a knockout artist, and I'm not out to prove anything. But I know if I don't knock this guy out quick, you guys are all going to say Larry Holmes is slipping, Larry Holmes is getting old, his legs are gone.

"What do you guys want to hear, that this guy's a piece of meat? All right, what's the record? How about 11 seconds? If this fight is an easy fight, I damn well deserve it."

Holmes has not been in any easy fights lately. He struggled against Weaver, whom he took lightly, and was knocked down and almost out by Shavers in a debilitating battle. After Zanon, he is scheduled to fight the undefeated Leroy Jones here March 31. He wants another fight — possibly against Leon Spinks if Spinks, a former champion, beats his next scheduled opponent, Eddie (Animal) Lopez — before meeting Tate. This is assuming that Tate beats Weaver on March 31, something Holmes said he did not think would happen.

"I just wish I was fighting Tate now instead of Zanon," said Holmes. "I'm stronger now than I was for Shavers. I feel like myself again."

Since last autumn's bout against Shavers, he has marked his 30th birthday (last Nov. 3) and has married (last Dec. 23). He can no longer dance and jab the way he once did, but he laughs when it is suggested that he is now an old married man.

"I don't dance because I have more confidence now," he said. "I can see punches coming, and I can pick them off, and I know if one gets through I can take it. Before, if I saw a punch coming, I was gone. But the more I settle down, the harder I punch. And my fights may be harder, but they're not as long. I'm not 100 miles away when I see a guy make a mistake."

The timing has always been off for Holmes. It was his misfortune to come along just after Ali, and one wonders whether even Joe Louis would have got all his deserved recognition had he been the successor to the self-proclaimed "greatest." But Holmes can now laugh at his "image" problem.

"He's the all-American boy," King said after Holmes told the promoter to take $20,000 from the champion's $600,000 purse and buy 200 tickets (which are very available) for underpriviledged local children, a local boys club and inmates at a nearby juvenile detention center.

Holmes has always had time for kids. He is a tireless worker for his hometown boys' club in Easton, Pa., and, wherever he goes, he visits children in hospitals and schools.

In some ways, time is on Larry Holmes's side. The more he is around, the more he is being appreciated, and not just for his boxing ability.

GOING STRONG: At 56, former Toronto goaltender Johnny Bower, now a scout with the National Hockey League club, continues to work out regularly with Maple Leafs. And with the club struggling along, standing 13th overall and near bottom of Adams Division, who's to say he may not get a chance to start a game one of these days? (CP Wirephoto).

Lafleur lashes out at casual attitudes

Times News Services

Guy Lafleur, all-star right winger with Montreal Canadiens, doesn't speak out too often — but when he does he doesn't mince his words.

At least he didn't in an interview with Bernard Brisset of Montreal's La Presse as the Canadiens rested in Newport Beach, Calif., in preparation for tonight's game against Los Angeles Kings.

In the interview, Lafleur attacked teammates and other National Hockey League players in general "who laugh at everyone by not always giving their maximum effort when they are on the ice."

Lafleur said, without naming any one, some players are less interested in playing hockey than in drawing their salary.

"It's reached a point where some of them don't want to play because they have a little headache. They go see the coach and say they're not up to playing in the game," said Lafleur.

"What do you expect a guy like (coach) Claude Ruel to do then?"

Lafleur said he would have skipped the last two weeks of play if he had been like several other players of today. The right winger, who, in addition to frequently being double-shifted and used on the point during power plays, said he has been handicapped by tonsilitis and general fatigue for the last two weeks.

"I know a number of players who are satisfied with 30 goals, while they could easily score 50 goals in a season," Lafleur added. "But they don't because they say the public and the boss will be more demanding. So they play without too much effort, draw their salary, stay in the background. Personally I couldn't do that."

In action Friday, Edmonton Oilers crushed Winnipeg Jets 9-2 as they waltzed to their 16th win of the season and Atlantae Flames beat Washington Capitals 4-2.

Wayne Gretzky recorded his first three goal NHL performance to lead the Oilers to victory but sharing the limelight was the Oilers' second line of Stan Weir, Dave Lumley and Dave Hunter. Weir, with a goal and three assists, Lumley with one goal and four assists and Hunter with a goal and two assists, accounted for a 12-point outing.

Winnipeg has only two wins and a tie in their last 19 games.

At Atlanta, Eric Vail scored on a 20-foot slap shot nine seconds into the final period to break a 1-1 tie. The goal was Vail's 17th of the year and the victory lifted the Flames to the .500 mark for the first time since Dec. 22.

Atlanta's record now stands at 22-22-7.

BRIEFLY: All-star defenceman Barry Beck of New York Rangers will be sidelined for two to three weeks with an injured left elbow . . . The Rangers recalled veteran Jocelyn Guevremont from New Haven of the American League.

Olympic mix a fact of life

TORONTO (CP) — The Olympics must change say Olympic gold-medal winner Mike Boit and Canadian Olympic medal hopeful Debbie Brill.

"The way the Olympics are set up, the fact is the political situation is built in so it is really very difficult to separate the Olympics from politics," said Boit, the 1978 Commonwealth Games 800-metre champion and 1,500- and 800-metre gold medal winner in the 1972 Olympic Games.

"That is because really every athlete actually represents his country and politics naturally has to come in."

The Kenyan, who won the 1,000-yard event at Friday's Toronto Star-Maple Leaf Indoor Games track meet, said it was time the International Olympic Committee recognized that politics and the Olympics go together.

"I think the situation is very important," Boit said. "What the Russians are doing in Afganistan, everybody should disagree with."

He suggested the athletes should have a say in the organization of the Olympics.

"They should make some decision so that they (the athletes) could have influence with regards to the organization," he said, "because now it seems the IOC says all the time that the Olympics and politics should be kept separate — but I think that at this time they must have realized that it is really very, very difficult to do so.

"They have to come up with a way to see that the politics can be kept at a very low profile. It cannot be totally eliminated but it will involve a lot of changes and a lot of sacrifices."

He agreed the probable solution to this years Games' dispute would be to hold alternative games for those countries who did not wish to attend the Moscow Games.

Boit was a victim of an Olympic Boycott at the 1976 Montreal Games when several African nations withdrew to protest the presence of South Africa.

He was forced to sit in the stands and watch someone else win the gold medals without a chance to defend his titles.

Brill, Canada's premier woman high jumper who won Friday night's event, took an even stronger stand.

"There's a part of me that says I would love to go and there is a part of me that says I hate what the Olympics have turned into," Brill said.

"I would love to see the end of the Olympics as we know it. It's been building and building and it's turned into a fraud. You get out there and it's not the sport anymore, it's the money and politics involved."

She said the Olympics should become a world festival while a separate world championship should be organized at a permanent site.

As for a boycott, Brill said there should only be one if it is a general boycott as opposed to just a few countries staying away.

Over 300 working out in marathon program

Royal Victoria Marathon

Judging by the number of persons who are taking advantage the pre-race training clinic, interest in the Royal Victoria Marathon, scheduled to be staged Sept. 20, is almost certain to overshadow any other single sports event in the city this year.

More than 300 men and women are turning for the Marathon Training Clinic in preparation for the big event supported by The Times and Radio CJVI.

Emphasis is on community involvement to provide an enjoyable event for the runners. The involvement also is meant to stir interest among casual joggers and would-be runners.

And there still is time to enroll.

If you've not yet begun the training clinic, there's still plenty of time to catch up with the group but turning out for the next weekly session, starting at 9:30 a.m., at the YM/YWCA on Courtenay Street.

The Times concludes its introductory series on the marathon with today's article on form and technique.

Many questions are asked by runners but the Number One question always seems to be: "What is the best form for running? Is there a special technique that will make you a good runner?"

The logical answer to both questions is DO WHAT COMES NATURALLY!

By now you should be running for a continuous period of one hour, three times a week with a day of rest before and after each running day. You should be maintaining your slow, steady pace and drinking 10 ounces of water every 20 minutes to get your stomach accustomed to accepting fluids "on the run."

If you've purchased your training manual, you will notice that each month's training information is accompanied by a calendar. Log your runs and times every day as this information can help you chart your progress. (Manuals are available at a cost of $5 at local recreation centres or at the "Y" training clinic. Every participant in the training Clinic should own one for his or her easy reference.)

Movement comes naturally to man. Unfortunately it's distorted by impractical footwear, automobiles, and jobs demanding less and less physical effort. As a result, the legs become weak and unbalanced. We pick up all the wrong ways of motion. Overstriding and leaning forward are two common mistakes.

If you're in a rush and walking very hurriedly, you are sending shock waves up and down your legs with every step. You land heavily on your heel, taking larger steps than usual, and you hunch forward to propel your body faster. There's nothing worse than this "dashing" from place to place. We all are guilty of it at one time or another.

It boils down to this: if you waste movement, you waste energy. You place added stress on your body, weakening your efficiency. Now that we've told you what you're doing wrong, how do you go about correcting it?

You must develop a style of your own — in walking and running, this is similar. The most common form problems in runners are easily spotted. Running on the toes, overstriding, hunched shoulders, tension, body rotation and poor posture are all indicative of bad form.

Also, do not copy another's form or style. Stay with the natural heel-to-toe motion in running as well as walking. To cure overstriding, try running uphill. This will force you to take shorter strides and avoid the danger of premature fatigue. When you are tired, you begin to land heavily on your heels and this is uncomfortable as well as exhausting.

Try to cultivate your own rhythm when you run. If you sway from side to side, you could be guilty of rolling your head or swinging your arms across your body. The head should always remain stationary on top of the shoulders, with the arms relaxed at the side and bent from the elbow at a 90-degree angle.

You should have a good view of the horizon. If you're looking at the ground too much, you're leaning too far forward or your head isn't placed correctly on your shoulders. The chin should always be at a 90-degree angle with the neck.

Keep muscles relaxed. If you are tired and starting to "sag" you have to concentrate even harder to keep you posture. Don't let this increased concentration make you tense or you will lose your efficiency.

Keep an eye on your hands as tension and fatigue are obvious here, too. Always keep them lightly closed; not clenched or flapping from the wrist. They should move as one with the forearm.

Flaws in your form should not all be corrected at once. If you go at them one at a time, you probably will cure more than the one fault simultaneously. If you take care of your form when fatigue sets in, your run will be much more pleasant.

The only real control that you have over your legs is the rate of speed and the amount of knee lift. The rest of the action happens so fast that it's next to impossibe to control it.

Good posture and strong legs and feet. These are the basics. Use an erect posture and a short, efficient stride, roll from heel to toe and relax. The rest will fall into place.

It all sounds simple, doesn't it? However, if you've already begun your training program, you've probably noticed some of the pitfalls described here and in previous discussions. Perhaps you've even wanted to scrap the program completely. DON'T!! You have to be willing to give it a chance to take hold. A week or even a month is not time enough to form a regular routine.

Take in all the oxygen you can, breathing through both mouth and nose whenever possible. Keep erect; bending forward restricts your diaphragm so you can't get all the oxygen you need. After running, do not bend over from fatigue as this will hinder your recovery. Let air in and out easily by standing straight or lying flat.

After you've been running regularly for about three months, you'll know precisely everything that's involved in a proper running program. You'll have set a pattern you're not likely to break. As well as the problems, you'll also know the pleasures. And it'll be worth it!

Injury-hit Cats call up help

Coach Jack Shupe of Victoria Cougars, concerned by a rash of injuries, has decided to call for some help for a Western Hockey League clash with Portland Winter Hawks tonight at Memorial Arena, starting at 8:30.

Jerry Heikkila, a 17-year-old defenceman who stands six feet tall and weighs 190 pounds, has been asked to report from Sherwood Park Crusaders of the Alberta Junior League.

Heikkila will play only the one game and return to Sherwood Park on Sunday. Len Dawes recently underwent surgery to repair nerve damage in his right toes and is expected to be out for another two weeks.

Rightwinger Randy Zinn is also out with a separated shoulder suffered during the game in Portland on Wednesday and will be sidelined for several days.

Shupe expects to move Bud McCarthy to right wing on a line with centre Barry Pederson and leftwinger Greg Adams.

Portland, meanwhile, moved one point ahead of Victoria in the tight battle for first place in the Western Division with a 6-5 decision over the visiting New Westminster Bruins on Friday.

Portland picked up four goals in the first period including two from Jim Dobson to jump to a 4-1 lead.

But the Bruins applied pressure in the second period, coming on with four goals, two by Brad Yachimec, with assists on both from Anthony McMurchy and Randy Wickware and went into the final period leading 5-4.

After Portland's Glen Ostir tied the contest with a slapshot at 6:49, clubmate John Multan fired a shot past Bruin goalie Tom Muc at 9:09 to secure the win.

Muc put the stops on 47 Winter Hawk shots, while Portland's Clint Malarchuk made 40 saves in Bruins' goal.

In other games, Regina captain Doug Wickenheiser scored a hat trick in the first period to spark the Pats to an 11-3 win over Billings Bighorns 11-3, Lethbridge Broncos hammered Brandon Wheat Kings 9-3 and Saskatoon Blades beat Seattle Breakers, 4-1.

TRAX 12 is the weather-teasing, owner-pleasing, all season radial from Firestone.

SPRING
Your TRAX 12 has open shoulder slots to channel water out the tread when driving on rain-soaked roads. This greatly reduces hydroplaning and provides better contact between your tires and the road.

SUMMER
The computer designed tread pattern of your TRAX 12 has a dividing center rib to keep your tires running quietly, even at highway speeds on hot summer roads.

FALL
The roads may be dry and hot one day and snow covered the next. That's okay. Your TRAX 12 radials may be better prepared for sudden changes in the weather than you are.

WINTER
Your TRAX 12 has tapered shoulders and interlocking deep groove lateral Z-bar cleats for positive traction in mud and snow and slush.

Kite misses victory kick

PEBBLE BEACH, Calif. (AP) — Tom Kite has had a highly-productive pro golf career, but in some ways it has also been puzzling and frustrating. In the last six years, he's won $738,732 as one of the most consistent players on the Professional Golfers' Association tour, but he's won only two tournaments.

"It grates me no end that I haven't won more," Kite said after moving into a tie with David Edwards for the lead after the second round Friday in the $300,000 Bing Crosby National pro-am tournament.

"I know my game is of the calibre to win more than two tournaments. I had three excellent opportunities to win last year and didn't get any of them.

"I can't explain it. I don't understand it. I've wracked my brains trying to figure it out."

Kite holed a sand-shot for a birdie on his way to a 70 on the intimidating Spyglass Hill course, while the 24-year-old Edwards, a former national collegiate champion now in his second year of tour activity, had a 69 on the same layout. They had matching 36-hole totals of 136, eight under par.

A single shot back at 137 were Jerry Pate and Steve Melnyk. Pate dropped a 50-foot birdie putt on the last hole for a 71 at Spyglass and Melnyk shot 68 at Cypress.

Australian David Graham the current PGA champion, had a 70 at Pebble Beach for a 138 total, and Gil Morgan shot 69, also at Pebble Beach, for 139.

Jim Nelford of Burnaby, with a 68 in the opening round, slipped to a 76 for 144. He was in a group of 11 at that total and eight strokes off the pace.

Dan Halldorson of Shilo, Man., fired a 74 for 145, while Dave Barr of Kelowna shot 76 for 151.

The format calls for the pros and their amateur partners — many of them show business celebrities — to play one round on each of the three courses before the field is cut for the final round at Pebble Beach.

Jack Nicklaus, whose comeback attempt showed such glowing promise on the strength of a first-round 69 at Cypress Point, was sent spinning back into the pack by an erratic 76 on the cliffs and crags of Spyglass. He was at 145.

Carner in good health

DEERFIELD BEACH, Fla. (AP) — JoAnne Carner fought stiff winds and cool weather to shoot a one-under-par 70 Friday, vaulting into the second-round lead of the $100,000 season-opening tournament on the Ladies Professional Golf Association tour.

Coming back from a wrist injury that sidelined her for four months last summer, Carner posted a two-day total of 140, two strokes ahead of first-round leader Sally Little of South Africa and Beth Daniel, the 1979 LPGA rookie-of-the-year.

Tied at 143 were Canada's Sandra Post, Donna H. White, Gail Hirata and Amy Alcott.

Cathy Sherk of Port Colborne, Ont., fired a 75 after an opening-round 73 for 148.

Carner, who had the only bogey-free round Friday, birdied the 18th hole, missing an eagle when her 40-foot putt hung on the lip of the cup.

Little had six bogeys and five birdies after playing 18 holes Thursday without a bogey.

"The wind is tough to play in anyway," she said. "But when it's this cold it's even harder."

The 72-hole tournament continues through Sunday.

Denver finds quarterback

DENVER (AP) — Denver Broncos got the quarterback they were looking by picking up Matt Robinson from New York Jets in exchange for first- and second-round choices in this year's National Football League draft and reserve quarterback Craig Penrose.

The Broncos had been looking to acquire a quarterback with NFL experience to either back up Craig Morton or replace Morton as starter in 1980.

Horrigan advances in coast playdowns

Tim Horrigan of Victoria Curling Club tripped Rick Pugh of the host club 9-4 in the opening round of the Pacific Coast Curling Association men's championship at New Westminster.

Horrigan, who calls the shots for Lowell Goulden, Kelly Horrigan and Dave Smith, grabbed a 3-0 lead in the first two ends en route to the victory.

Defending B.C. champion Glen Pierce of Vancouver, meanwhile, lost his opener, bowing 10-9 to Wayne Statton of Chilliwack.

In other games, Gary Sigurdson of Vancouver edged Wayne Frank of Maple Ridge 4-3 and Barry Naimark of Vancouver beat Brad Clarke of Victoria's Playland, 9-1.

The modified triple-knockout tournament ends Sunday with the top four rinks advancing to the provincial championship next week.

Bert Gretzinger of Kelowna, Wayne Laface of Vernon, Eric Wiltzen of Kamloops and Bruce Young of Cranbrook will represent the Interior, following success in this week's interior showdown at Vernon.

Meanwhile, in Quesnel, the Mike Bradley rink of Kelowna stood alone in first place at 6-0 after eight rounds of the B.C. high school championships.

Diane Cook of North Vancouver was top in the girl's division with a 5-1 record.

Ralph Kitchen of Victoria is 5-1 after taking 8-4 and 8-2 wins from Ken Emslie of Sparwood and Chris Clifford of Terrace, respectively.

In the girl's division, Sally Schmautz of Williams Lake shares second with Susan Smith of Duncan and Linda McFarland of Chilliwack, all at 4-2.

Butler to serve

EDMONTON (CP) — Edmonton Eskimos have signed Canadian Football League all-star Gregg Butler to a five-year contract. Butler, 27, a defensive back who came to the Eskimos from Los Angeles Rams in 1977, led the Western Conference with 71 punt returns for 623 yards.

Richett, McWhinnie top bowlers

Elsie McWhinnie rolled a red-hot single game and Larry Richett came up with a relatively well-balanced effort to claim the fivepin awards during the 15th week of competition in the 17th annual Times Bowler-of-the-Week contest.

Elsie opened with a 253 game, added a massive 393 middle effort and finished off with 232 for an 877 series in the Thursday Coffee League at Chemainus Bowlarena.

Larry captured men's laurels with a 329-297-258 — 884 series in the Wednesday Majors League at Town and Country.

Scoreless deadlock

University of Victoria Vikings and Vancouver Whitecaps Reserves battled to a scoreless deadlock in an exhibition soccer match Friday at Centennial Stadium.

Our Debbies in good form

Two "Debbies" from the University of Victoria made their marks Friday in track and field.

Debbie Scott, who is ranked tops nationally in the indoor 1,500 metres, won that event at the Golden Bears' invitational indoor meet in Edmonton.

She won with a time of four minutes, 26.9 seconds.

Meanwhile, in Toronto, Debbie Campbell finished second to American June Griffths in the 600 metres at the Toronto Star-Maple Leaf indoor games.

Griffiths won in 1:31.6 and Campbell finished in 1:31.9.

Two other Victorians also cracked the medal list at Edmonton. Brent Fougner won the triple jump with a leap of 15.25 metres while Allan Sherican was third in the men's 50 metres hurldes.

In Toronto, Debbie Brill of Aldergrove soared 1.90 metres to tie the meet record in winning the high jump event.

Evelyn Ashford of Los Angeles continued to assert her No. 1 ranking as the top woman sprinter by capturing the 50-yard dash in 5.86 seconds. But it was crowd-favorite Angela Taylor of Toronto who garnered the cheers when she finished second in 5.95, a Canadian native record and 1-100ths of a second ahead of American Brenda Moorehead.

Tanzanian Suleiman Nyambui of the University of Texas, El Paso, took the men's three-mile race in 13:11.7; Emit King of Jefferson State took the men's 50-yard dash in 5.38; Mike Boit of Kenya won the men's invitational 1,000-yard race in 2:09.4, and Scott Robertson of Calgary Spartans won the 1,500-metre race and Jan Merrill of Hartford, Conn., took the women's 1,500.

He said the Queen of Surrey is the best available within the next two years.

The Social Credit caucus voted unanimously to put the Surrey on the route, Elworthy said in a memorandum to steamship corporation directors also obtained by the Canadian Press.

In September, Phillips "stated categorically and without any reservation that the Queen of Surrey was B.C. Steamship's vessel and the finance minister would arrange the transfer from one corporation to the other."

Phillips then went to Japan and Korea without announcing the transfer, but on his return assured Elworthy the ship was for the steamship corporation, the memo said.

"Gallagher told me at this point that he was recommending to his board and the minister that B.C. ferries would use the Surrey on the north run," the memo says.

The memo says the cabinet committee held three meetings later, but the last two "were a sham."

"Gallagher wasted our time talking about ships that were too large and also not for sale."

Elworthy said Gallagher took offence "to my pointing out his errors — not giving his board and the minister enough facts to make proper judgments," on the proposed Port Hardy-Prince Rupert run.

"He stated that when his corporation was set up, he was given that ship. I suggested that B.C. should be our first priority — the greatest need being in Victoria. I indicated to him that he hadn't heard the last of this or of me."

It has since been learned that while the front-loading Queen of Prince Rupert will have no problems docking in Seattle, she will not be able to dock in Victoria unless a hole is cut in her side to allow vehicles to get on and off.

(Neither Gallagher or Elworthy was available today for comment on the letter).

the house

by jake banky

Psst. Hey buddy, want a cheap idea for political success? Hardly used. Very low mileage.,

The idea was born seven years ago when I read a report on housing in Greater Vancouver. The report said a majority of single-family homes in the city were in dreadful shape, raddled with age and riddled with termites. It called for government aid to save existing homes, rather than showy programs to build expensive new homes.

Nobody listened of course. The report slid into hundreds of wastebaskets. The real estate market continued to thrive. The termites continued to eat their little heads off.

Nothing has changed since then. There still are thousands of older homes that need work but are worth saving, not only in Vancouver but in Victoria, Prince George, Kelowna and every other city and town in the province.

Hence, Banky's Guaranteed Route to Political Success (patent pending): Just come up with a workable plan to provide financial aid to the owners of older homes who want to repair and renovate them but can't afford it.

The $200 million that Premier Bill Bennett has pledged for low-interest mortgages is expected to produce, at best, 3,000 new units. That's a poor return for the investment.

The same amount of money or even half, could be used to save thousands more existing homes. The construction and lumber industries would still benefit from the building boom.

The politician who develops a plan for low-interest loans, possibly even grants, for the owners of older homes will win the undying gratitude of thousands of middle-income earners caught in a common bind — leaky gutters and crumbling porches on one side, sky-high interest rates on the other.

What we don't want, though, is another one of those showcase programs so beloved by Ottawa, designed to look good and accomplish nothing.

Remember the RRAP rip-off a couple of years back?

Under that federal program, owners of elderly houses in designated urban areas were supposed to qualify for forgiveable, low-interest loans to repair and spruce up their homes. Of course it didn't work that way.

To qualify for a forgiveable loan, you and your family had to be earning less than $11,000 a year gross. Families who earn that little don't own a home to fix up.

Anybody earning above that level who applied for a RRAP loan found themselves paying the regular bank interest rate. What a con!

We don't need any more like that. However if either Bennett or NDP leader Dave Barrett marched into the next election campaign waving an effective blueprint for government aid to refurbish existing homes, he'd be a sure-fire winner.

There are thousands of British Columbians who would vote for a party that was ready to help fix the roof. There are thousands who would give votes, eye-teeth and their five BCRIC shares for the chance of a remodelled kitchen. Just ask my wife.

Joe Clark rode to power in 1979 on the promise of mortgage interest deductibility. The promise of aid to the owners of older homes would appeal to the same selfish but essentially sensible instincts.

The politician who saves homes from deterioration and eventual demolition will end up providing more affordable housing than the one who only builds new homes.

And in the long run, thousands of spruced-up homes that may last another half century make an even better monument to a politician than a domed stadium.

Help yourselves to the idea, Bill and Dave. No charge. Just a quiet note of thanks after your election victory. Or possibly a small, tasteful brass plaque in my renovated bathroom.

Still with a housing theme . . . MLAs arriving in town to prepare for the coming legislative session are finding themselves eyeball-to-eyeball with the shortage of rental accommodation.

There isn't a sutable apartment to be had for love, money or the complete collection of Hansard.

Several members who showed up confidently expecting to get the same digs as last year are in a state of shock.

Some have managed to find themselves cramped quarters in rooming houses. Others expect to make do with a cot in a friend's home.

So far it's mostly the NDP members who got the bad news when they showed up for a two-day caucus meeting this week. The Socred caucus meets next week and the government backbenchers will find themselves in the same bind.

Early visitors to MLAs' offices this session may find their member curled up in sleeping bag under his desk.

Writing: does it portray personality?

Thomas . . . every little squiggle tells her something.

There is no doubt that men express their character through their handwriting" — Sigmund Freud.

By BRENDA DALGLISH

Joan Thomas agrees wholeheartedly.

She says handwriting can tell just about everything except the writer's age or sex.

Thomas, of 731 Claremont, is a graduate graphoanalysist, a science she claims is generally 90 per cent correct.

In the U.S., analysts are employed by personnel departments to consider job applicants.

It is considered a valuable aid in counselling work too, she says, because it's a method to observe personality which can't be distorted.

The Chicago-based International Graphoanalysis Society says a person's writing-stroke formation is dictated by impulses from the brain.

Consequently a person can't hide his true personality traits from a graphoanalyst by altering his handwriting.

In fact, personality traits can be detected even if the pen is held in the opposite hand or even in the teeth, says Thomas.

"Analysis can be done on youngsters before they are old enough to write by examining the strokes they make with a crayon."

She needs at least a page of writing sample to do a thorough analysis.

"Just about every mark on the paper can be interpreted," she says.

The slant of the writing, pressure used, loops, curls, letter-spacing — even the angle of the lines must be taken into consideration.

It takes about an hour to do a complete analysis of a sample, she says, scorning graphologists at fairs and exhibitions who claim to be capable of analysing a person from a writing sample of only a few words.

Sometimes the information that's revealed is surprising, she says.

Like when she analysed her teenaged daughter's writing.

"Before I did it I couldn't understand why I didn't understand her. Afterwards I realized that we're very different people."

"If you have a traumatic change in your life, like a divorce for example, your writing would reflect that."

She told of a woman diagnosed as having a split personality who was functioning with three personalities.

Samples of the woman's writing were taken when she was in each of the three states and each sample, says Thomas, was radically different.

After undergoing psychoanalysis, the woman's personalities were integrated and her writing style became consistent, although different than any of the original three.

To test Thomas' conviction that handwriting does reveal character traits the Times supplied samples to her for analysis.

The samples were from Jim Campbell, chairman of the Capital Regional Board and Times' music and drama critic Audrey Johnson.

Thomas was given only their sex and aproximate age.

Thomas emphasized that the thumbnail sketches she supplied aren't the same as a complete and thorough analysis but her subjects say she came through.

Johnson said she was surprised by Thomas' accuracy while Campbell, who was initially sceptical about the validity of the exercise, admitted when he heard the results they did reflect some aspects of his character.

Her analysis of Campbell:

"This man likes to base his judgements on an objective view rather than an emotional one. In times of stress or excitement he is not always able to do this. Some people may be able to forgive and forget but he could not forget.

"If he suspected that someone was taking advantage of his charitability they'd hear about it.

"To this person problems are a challenge. Here is a dynamic and forceful personlity with a touch of showmanship added. He can think on his feet and enjoys nothing more than a good debate. Although he's quite a conversationalist he only divulges what he wants people to know.

"He requires variation in his life, a monotonous task would stifle him. He could easily negotiate and manoeuvre in the areas of management or leadership. He prefers to live in an atmosphere that provides good food, fine materials and a liberal dose of culture.

Johnson:

"Anything that appeals to the emotions will invoke a response from this lady. She reacts profoundly for the moment but doesn't allow these feelings to color the rest of her life.

"A nimble mind enables her to grasp new concepts quickly. She will explore a thought or idea further if it falls within her area of interest.

"This writer may become impatient and testy, loosing a pointed remark or two. She also manoeuver smoothly, come directly to the point, or take a backdoor approach. She tailors her response to the occasion.

"Friendly and sociable, she nevertheless selects her close companions very carefully. She prefers to do things in a routine and orderly fashion. Her energies are conserved and channeled into pursuits that require a sense of skill, timing and rhythm.

"She likes to use her hands and would not be satisfied with the finished product unless it reaches near perfection.

"This person has aptitudes in several fields. The most prominent of which are: music, the use of machines or instruments and public relations.

Hydrofoil eyed on Seattle run

Tourist operators and businessmen are more optimistic today about the Princess Marguerite's replacement after a meeting at B.C. Ferry Corp. headquarters where it was proposed to add a hydrofoil to the Seattle run.

"I was a little apprehensive about it," said Les Wood, operator of the Undersea Garden on the Inner Harbor.

But after the meeting between ferry officials, the B.C. Steamship Corp. and about 20 local businessmen "I felt a little better today than yesterday."

The vice-president of the Visitors' Information Centre said they came away convinced that it is feasible for the Queen of Prince Rupert to make two round trips a day.

Ald. Bob Wright, who was at the meeting as owner of several tourist-related ventures in the Victoria region, said the group's main recommendation to B.C. Ferry Corp. president Charles Gallagher was that the government try to get a Boeing hydrofoil to augment the Rupert this summer.

It could make three trips a day to Seattle and back, with up to 250 people each time, he said.

Combined with the 1,650 a refitted Rupert will carry in two trips, there could be 2,350 American tourists hitting the dock here every day, 500 more than the Marguerite, Wright added.

"That would then turn this problem into an opportunity. And we're all excited by that," said Wright.

"We believe with the combination of the two we have an opportunity to accommodate all the people who want to come to Victoria. If that comes to pass we're confident the government will have more than compensated for the Marguerite."

However, the Boeing corporation threw some cold water on the group's plan.

Rudy Stapes of the company's jetfoil division told the Times Friday afternoon that Boeing has no jetfoils available immediately for charter or sale and the nearest one for lease is probably on the other side of the Pacific Ocean.

"The nearest one in this area would be Japan," he said with a chuckle.

Stapes said Boeing isn't in the leasing business and if the government wanted to buy one of the jetfoils, the cost would be in excess of $11 million U.S. (close to $13 million Canadian), he said.

"Normally, we do not charter," Stapes said in a telephone interview.

Sometimes if a customer orders one or two for purchase, Boeing will make a jetfoil available for the peak summer period, but "at this moment, because of manufacturing schedules I cannot quite see that we will have a boat for charter."

Test runs subsidized by Boeing have been made in recent years to prove the feasibility of hydrofoil service across Puget Sound and between Seattle and Victoria to try to sell B.C. and Washington on them. No sales have been made to either ferry fleet.

Boeing has sold 15 of the high-speed boats, which could make the Seattle-Victoria run in about two hours at their regular speed of 43 knots (80 kilometres an hour).

The company operated with a restricted capacity last year in hydrofoil manufacture because military shipbuilding contracts took precedence but those have now been fulfilled, Stapes said.

Some Boeing jetfoils are in Japan and the latest sale was a pair for a London-Ostend ferry run which starts up Feb. 29, Stapes added. Next winter, a Dublin-Liverpool jetfoil service is scheduled to start using a Boeing vessel.

"We are selling rather well," said Stapes. "Right now we're in the process of delivering the 15th boat."

Five treated after cabaret punchup

At least five persons, including the president of the Victoria Bounty Hunters Motorcycle Club, were patched up in hospital today after a donnybrook in a cabaret parking lot.

The brawl erupted early today beside the Surfside Cabaret, 1208 Wharf, and was apparently caused by someone spilling a tray-full of drinks over a waitress.

A police spokesman said when officers arrived, there were numerous fights in progress and for a time there were fears one of the combatants had fallen into the Inner Harbor and drowned.

He was later found in one of the hospitals receiving treatment for his wounds.

David Krenbrink, 23, of 511 Macaulay, described by police as president of the motorcycle club, was taken to Royal Jubilee Hospital where he was treated for cuts to his face and later released.

Two other persons — Patrick Leno, 25, of 4010 Wiseton and William Armstrong, 24, of 3280 Kenwood — were treated for facial cuts at Victoria General Hospital.

A VGH spokesman said two more persons involved in the melee were treated in emergency but their names were not available.

Vote revision cutoff Monday

You won't be voting Feb. 18 if your name is not on a voters' list by 10 p.m. Monday when the nine-day revision period for federal election urban lists expires.

Because the 32nd general election was called on short notice, election officials did not conduct the usual door-to-door enumeration.

Instead, they relied on voters' lists used for last May's election.

Cards were mailed to every one of the millions of registered voter telling them they were eligible to vote Feb. 18. Those who did not receive cards had to get in touch with returning officers themselves.

Students living away from home and have declared their parent's address as their ordinary residence can vote by proxy if they can't get home by Feb. 18.

Ask the Times

Q. In the last 1,000 years which assumed leap years were cancelled out (the year 1900 was one)? F.N.H.L.

A. There were eight — 1000, 1100, 1300, 1400, 1500, 1700, 1800, 1900. A leap year occurs in every year that can be divided evenly by four, except the years that mark the even hundred. The only centuries that are leap years are those divisible evenly by 400.

Of all the names to choose

A 24-year-old Victoria man sought by Toronto police on drug charges unwittingly chose the name of a prison escaper as an alias, a provincial court judge heard Friday.

Police believed he was the escaper, arrested him and Friday, because of the coincidence, Ronald William Aldred drew an eight year jail term.

Aldred, who had fled the Toronto charges while free on $4,000 bail, eventually ended up in the Victoria area.

The court was told he registered at the Pacific Isle Motel, 626 Gorge Road East, under the name of David Hanson, an alias apparently chosen at random.

But the motel clerk recognized Aldred from a previous stay, grew suspicious and contacted police about "Hanson".

At the time, police were seeking a prison escaper called David Hanson.

Officers arrested Aldred believing he was the escaped convict and found approximately 5,400 grams (10½ pounds) of marijuana valued at about $9,000 in a kit bag.

Aldred pleaded guilty to the May 12, 1978, Toronto charge of importing hashish and a Dec. 8, 1979, Victoria charge of possession of marijuana for the purpose of trafficking.

Crown counsel Martha McNeely told Judge William Ostler Aldred was arrested May 12, 1978, at Toronto International Airport as he was going through Canadian customs after landing from an Air Jamaica flight.

A search produced four body packs containing a total of 1,552 grams (three pounds) of hash oil valued at approximately $19,500.

Defence lawyer Dean Wilson told the court Aldred was freed on $4,000 bail and a trial was set for July, 1978.

But Aldred never attended for his trial, Wilson continued, and eventually came back to Victoria.

He registered at the Pacific Isle, moved to another motel but the returned shortly afterward to the Pacific Isle on Dec. 8, picking the name David Hanson for his second stay.

Aldred had three previous related convictions, all for simple possession of a narcotic.

He was fined $75 in August, 1974, in Victoria, $250 in April, 1975, in Edmonton and $150 in August, 1976, in Calgary.

Wilson said his client brought in the hash oil as a "foolish lark," thinking it wasn't a serious offence.

Finding out that conviction carried a seven-year, minimum sentence, Aldred said he decided to flee.

Ostler said that while it was to Aldred's credit that he wished to clear up all the matters with guilty pleas, there was not excuse for fleeing, although it was understandable.

The judge imposed the minumum sentence of seven years on the Toronto charge and added another year on the Victoria charge.

He said it normally would have been concurrent but that the outrageousness of committing the offence while skipping bail called for a consecutive term.

A gentle push starts 'em young

VANCOUVER (CP) — For skiers who hit the slopes late in life there's nothing more humiliating than the sight of a five-year-old, barely tall enough to reach a rope tow, hurtling down the hill in complete control and as unintimidated as an Olympic downhiller.

It's not just youthful abandon — some youngsters are into their third season on the slopes by the time they turn five, having shuffled about on skis since learning to walk.

Some children have the co-ordination and strength to do what passes for skiing when they're two. Others can't get the hang of it until they're five or more.

Instructors at North Vancouver's Grouse Mountain think three is a reasonable age for a youngster to get involved. That's the minimum age they accept in their Ski-wee program.

"But I want to stress that it's not skiing instruction," says Ruth Saxvik, head of the 11-year-old program. "Our aim is to get them to enjoy the snow, to get the feeling of things on their feet.

"You could call it an initiation into the great white world of snow."

Ms. Saxvik thinks the program has advantages over parents trying to initiate their tots. Parents sometimes expect too much, press too hard, and don't understand their children's limitations.

"Often you'll hear a parent — usually the father — saying, 'Go down the hill and make sure you do it right.' It's too hard on the kids doing it that way and they end up hating skiing for life."

The Ski-wee program stresses gentle persuasion. The instructors are chosen less for their ability to instruct than for their ability to work with youngsters.

"They blow noses, wipe away tears, encourage, cajole and inspire," Ms. Saxvik says.

And while they will learn from adults, the children also pick up a lot from one another.

"It's peer pressure at work. They see the ones who are doing well and try to emulate them."

For the younger ones especially, it's mainly a matter of making them feel comfortable on the boards. Classic knees-together turns are still several years away.

You certainly couldn't call a lot of what they do skiing. Some of the youngsters literally don't know their right leg from their left.

By DR. L.L. COLEMAN

I am utterly miserable. I have had a herpes infection in the genital area for two years. My husband, too, has the same problem. We don't know where to turn for further treatment.

Mrs. J.P.N.

Dear Mrs. N.:

Infections in the genital area, in both men and women, are a great source of distress. Besides the pain and discomfort, there is the psychological impact of such an infection.

These infections are caused by the herpes virus Type 2. Even though the diagnosis is readily made, the condition is often resistant to modern forms of treatment.

Very recently, a new and promising treatment for genital herpes simplex was reported by Dr. Herbert A. Blough, a specialist in the study of viruses at the University of Pennsylvania School of Medicine, in Philadelphia. He has treated 36 women with a chemical that interferes with the survival of the virus. The drug, 2-deoxy-D-glucose, was applied vaginally four times a day for three weeks.

Of the women treated with a first infection, 95 percent were cured with only two recurrences after two years. Women with recurrent infection showed significant improvement, although to a lesser degree.

So encouraging are the results that Dr. Blough says, "We are looking in a new direction in treating viral infections with this type of drug, which has a different mode of action. I am hopeful that within a year's time the drug will become more available for large-scale treatment of this disease."

Dear Doctor:

How can skin cancer of the cheek be removed without disfigurement?

Miss L.N.

Dear Miss N.:

The successful rate of cure for skin cancer of the face is high. When recognized early and treated, the results are astonishingly good. Treatment, of course, is devoted to the cure of the cancer, taking into consideration the best cosmetic result.

The ideal treatment, therefore, is the one that cures. Choosing a method of treatment based chiefly on cosmetic results is hazardous.

These tumors can be removed by surgery, by chemical and electrical cauterization, by cryosurgery (freezing method) and other techniques.

The choice of the treatment modality must be left to the judgment of the doctor. No doctor will ever sacrifice safety for appearance. A small scar is a small price to pay for saving a life.

Dear Doctor:

A year ago I was diagnosed as having "interstitial" pneumonia. I still have it. I've been trying unsuccessfully to find books that will tell me more about this condition. I have almost completely stopped smoking, but haven't made the final break yet. Can you give me any information about the cause and treatment for this problem.

Mr. P.K.

Dear Mr. K.:

The difficulty that you have had in finding material that will clarify your problem is due to the fact that interstitial pneumonia is really a complex grouping of lung conditions, rather than a single one.

Yet all of these subdivisions of infiltrative lung diseases have symptoms which resemble each other. Sometimes, it is extremely difficult to pinpoint the diagnosis and the cause of this variety of pulmonary disorders.

Even laboratory studies are not clearly definitive. X-rays of the lungs give a moderate amount of information, but here, too, the total answer is not available.

In many instances, longterm use of cortisone has dramatically reduced the progression of the disease. The inhalation of oxygen in a high concentration has proven effective in relieving some of the symptoms of difficulty in breathing, at least temporarily.

Certainly, the pollution of tobacco must add to your distress. Someone with your lung condition should waste no time in making that "break."

Dr. Coleman welcomes your letters. Personal replies, however, cannot be given, and only letters of broadest public interest will be published. Write c/o The Victoria Times, 2621 Douglas St., Victoria, V8W 2N4.

abby

Dear Abby:

My wife and I will be married 40 years soon and plan to give a dinner party to celebrate this joyous occasion.

Our family and most of our friends are aware that this will be our 40th wedding anniversary, but we positively do not want any gifts.

You once stated in your column that it was improper to indicate, "No gifts, please" on an invitation. Later you not only reversed yourself but offered some excellent alternatives. What were they?

Inquiry

Dear Inquiry:

I have stated many times that any mention whatsoever of gifts was improper on an invitation. This includes the forthright "No gifts, please," as well as the tasteless (in my view) suggestion that cash is preferred to any other type of gift.

Many sent sample invitations in which gifts were mentioned. Below is one that changed my mind:

"The children of Alice and Donald Brown invite you to celebrate with them the 50th wedding anniversary of their parents. A reception will be held May 20, 5 p.m. at Hillcrest Country Club.

"We request your help in compiling a book which recalls memories from our parents' first 50 years of marriage. On the enclosed sheet, we ask that you write one memory or event that you have shared with them, and return it to us by April 25. We believe that the loving memories they have shared with you, their friends, would be the most treasured gift they could receive; therefore, we request that no other gift be sent."

Dear Abby:

Years ago, when married people were invited to weddings, the invitations were addressed to "Mr. and Mrs."

Have times changed? Recently my physician husband received two wedding invitations addressed to him only. One was from a nurse, the other from a patient.

He attended both weddings by himself because he is dedicated to his profession; but I feel my not being invited, and his accepting without me, was rude.

Invisible Partner

Dear Partner:

The invitations should have included you. But since they did not, your husband should have either requested permission to bring you — or stayed home himself.

Dear Abby:

Please settle an argument. Where I work, there is this woman who has silver-gray hair but a young face and a good figure. She must be about 50 but looks younger. She has 12 grandchildren, but she swims with them, rides a bicycle with them and belongs to three bowling teams.

She says she never babysits with her grandchildren unless there is an emergency. Everyone says I am all wet with my ideas but I think a grandmother should act like a grandmother and should be more proud of her grandchildren than her bowling score.

A Mother

Dear Mother:

This grandmother is acting like a grandmother. A modern one. Nowadays you can't tell a grandmother by looking at her, and I say more power to her.

Abby welcomes your letters. Send them c/o The Times, 2621 Douglas St., Victoria, V8W 2N4.

Long winter evenings can be put to good use

with may e. mac lean

By MAY MacLEAN

Now is as good a time as any to give some thought to what we should do with our leisure hours for the balance of the winter.

There are still many long evenings ahead of us.

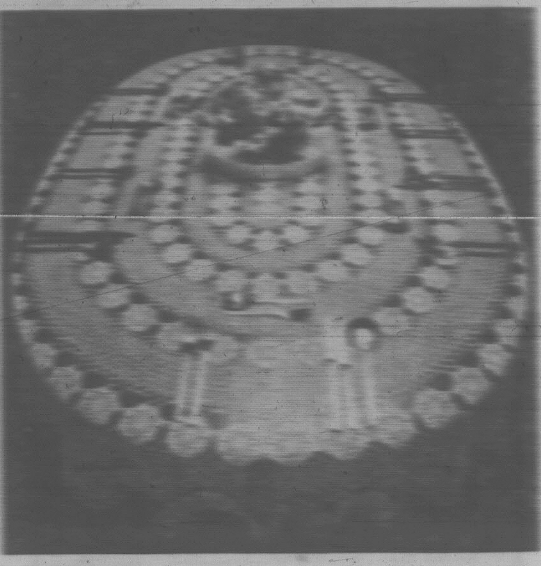
I always try to make these last three months of the winter profitable, by making a fairly large article. That way I feel the time I have has been well spent. There is nearly always someone who has a daughter getting married in the coming June, and making a wedding gift seems just that much more personal.

I have used these winter evenings to crochet a tablecloth, and I have a lovely round pineapple pattern, which is on Leaflet No. 6953. The finished size is about 72 inches in diameter.

Another winter I made my daughter two lovely afghans in pure white mohair. They were so soft and light, just like a cloud, and she adores them. I used pattern No. 6677 for these.

Another year I knitted a bedspread with cotton. This simple pattern is on Leaflet No. 7000 and is worked in about 12-inch squares, then the attractive leaf pattern is joined to make the bedspread and finished off with fringing. A similar design for a knitted afghan in wool or sayelle is on Leaflet No. 1073. There are also directions for a cushion on this leaflet made from four knitted squares.

So give some thought as to what you would like to do, depending on the amount of time that you will have, and if necessary be strict with yourself and set targets. If it happens to be a crochet bedspread made up of motifs, set a target of one a day, or so many a week. Before you know it you will have the required amount. If you are like me, I always relish and enjoy the finishing off, enjoying the satisfaction and sense of achievement.



Oval-shaped crocheted tablecloth

This week's pattern is a good suggestion of a winter's project, a crochet oval tablecloth made from Coats Chain Mercer-Cotton No. 20. The finished size is approximately 146x216 cm (57x85 inches) in diameter.

To order Leaflet No. 4651 or any other leaflet mentioned, send 75 cents plus a stamped, self-addressed return envelope, a long one if possible. If you do not have a stamp or envelope, please enclose an extra 25 cents to cover the cost of handling and print your name and address. Send to May E. MacLean, Knit and Chat, 46 Montford Dr., Dollard des Ormeaux, Que. H9G 1M6.

Please be sure to state pattern numbers correctly when ordering and to enclose your stamped, return envelope for faster service. All back numbers of my series are available, price 75 cents each; catalogue of bazaar items, 25 cents together with a stamped return envelope.

High-flying toad should land safely

Dr. Frank Miller

The Wonderful World of ANIMALS

Dear Dr. Miller:

After vacation, I have to fly back home and I'm planning on snuggling Squat, my toad, along with me. I'll have him wrapped in a moist towel in my bag under the seat. I'm only wondering if the altitude will hurt him.

P.C.

Dear P.C.:

Dear P.C.: Your toad can take it in all probability since the cabin's presumably pressurized at high altitude, and toads have been found making it on mountains at an 8,000-foot elevation.

Dear Dr. Miller:

My young cat, Titin, and a sweet one he was, too, had had a distemper shot when I got him. A lot of good it did. The little tyke was vomiting and died before I could get around to getting him to a veterinarian. They said he died from distemper. What I want to know is, what good does it do to give a distemper shot when the stuff doesn't even work?

E.V.

Dear E.V.:

Feline panleukopenia (cat distemper) vaccine provides vital protection for kittens and cats against a highly contagious deadly disease.

In order to provide that needed protection, however, the vaccine itself must be of good quality, properly cared for and administered, and the kitten (or cat) must be in good enough condition to be able to respond to the vaccination appropriately and to develop an immunity. When the needed criteria are met, the immunity developed as a result of feline distemper immunization is excellent and protection against this dangerous disease is more than adequate.

Dear Dr. Miller:

On three sides of our property, we have eight large dogs surrounding us. Is this in any way harmful to our health? Our bedroom is ten feet from one fence.

H.E.

Dear H.E.:

You should be in a better position to answer your own question than I am. As far as airborne infections contaminating you by drifting over that fence and into your bedroom window, forget it. As far as other pollution however, noise in particular, of course that could be problem. Other health problems could conceivably arise relating to the disposition of the dogs and your inclination to get on their side of the fence.

Beyond this, however, I can think of no other factors for concern.

Dear Dr. Miller:

Which has babies faster, a house mouse or a house rat?

Dear E.A.:

It's nip and tuck, with a gestation of 21 days for each. Occasionally, though, the house mouse might shave that by a day or two.

Meat cut out

ROME (AP) — Diners in the Soviet Union likely will have less poultry and pork on their plates this year because of the U.S. grain embargo, the United Nations Food and Agriculture Organization said Friday. In its monthly food outlook, the organization said that Soviet planners would probably reduce meat consumption to save animal feed.

Pot-luck falls short of good plant care

There are many plants which spend their entire lifetime in a pot, and if it were possible, would be as careful as we are in selecting the type of home best suited to their needs.

The designs of houses, and the building materials change, so do the sizes, shapes and materials of which pots are made.

We have adjusted our furniture and ways of living to suit the new homes, and likewise the soil mixtures and frequency of watering has to be adjusted to suit the materials of present day containers.

Clay pots absorb moisture from the soil, releasing it to the atmosphere, or to the soil as it dries out, so that watering allows for these losses. These pots are especially suited to plants which need potting in a heavy soil, well compacted to prevent rapid growth under indoor conditions.

Plastic pots do not absorb moisture therefore require great care in watering and special soil mixtures containing sufficient coarse material such as sand for good drainage.

When plastic pots first appeared on the market most of the difficulties with plants were caused by using the standard soil mixtures recommended for clay pots.

Drainage holes in plastic containers often require attention. When purchased the holes are frequently closed, or partially closed with a thin film of plastic which has to be cut out with a sharp knife. This particularly applies to those with four holes in the side just about the base.

The central drainage holes in plastic pots are sometimes quite small; these should be made larger, even twice the diameter, otherwise, the soil may remain too wet and rot away the young roots.

Various plastic resins are used for making containers, some of which make a product which is easily broken. Cheap plastic pots are in this class. It pays to compare prices and buy the best.

Pots must be scrupulously clean. Even new pots should be soaked and well washed, the clay pots to absorb moisture, the plastic to remove any coating that might be harmful to the plants.

Used pots will need soaking for a day or so and scrubbing with a stiff brush as a precaution against contaminating new soil with pests or diseases.

It is always wise to crock a pot before filling it with soil otherwise the drainage holes may become plugged.

Crock is pieces of broken clay pots placed curved side up over the hole or holes. If broken pot is not available do not use small stones or flat pieces which will prevent water from escaping by plugging the holes; better to use a few large stones to cover the base.

Drainage material needed in large pots consists of a layer of small stones placed over the crock without disturbing. Coarse compost, obtained when the regular compost is screened for the soil mixture, is placed over the drainage material to keep it in place.

The plant to be potted is held in either hand, the roots carefully lowered into the pot and the plant held at the correct height to determine how much soil mixture should be added before the plant is set.

More plants are lost through overpotting than suffer from being in too small a pot. When a small plant is transferred to a large pot there will be very little root in the large amount of soil. The excess soil will remain wet, become stagnant, causing the roots to rot away as they form and gradually kill the plant.

Always pot up into one size large (one inch larger in diameter when using pots from 5 to 9 inches and only one-half inch larger in sizes from 2 to 4½ inches.

Crushed charcoal from a wood fire, or purchased from a florist or plant store, is added to the soil mixture to absorb poisonous gases which form.

When plants have been dried or given minimum water during a resting period, it is rarely necessary to repot in a size larger pot. The plant can be removed from its present pot by inverting and striking the rim on the edge of a solid table or bench and the plant will come free with its ball of soil.

The soil can be carefully loosened and shaken off the roots and the plant set in new soil in the same size pot.

Plants can be removed from their pots at any time in this way to examine the state of the roots or the condition of the soil, and firmly replaced by dropping the pot an inch or so into a firm surface.

Its always pays to do potting or repotting carefully. Occasionally we see articles giving short cut techniques, methods designed to reduce labor costs in commercial establishments, but very often at the expense of a good plant. Amateurs can indulge in a more leisurely approach, aiming at perfection rather than speed.

When purchased, plants are usually in a size of pot and a soil mixture suitable for one year if a fast growing plant, or two years for slow growers. Don't repot into a larger pot when you get the plant home; it will most likely suffer and die.

Making group plantings in a large container or indoor planter requires full knowledge of the needs of the plants to be successful.

Some plants need a poor soil, others a rich soil, some a minimum of water, some moderate amounts and others heavy watering. Also the growing and resting peiods must be considered, for one must not be in full growth when its companion should be resting with little water or nourishment.

Be sure that all plants in one container are matched in their requirements, flowering time, and resting period.

The alternative is to fill the container with an inert material such as sponge rock, sand, pea gravel, (but not acid peat moss) and bury each plant in its own pot to the rim. Watering can then be regulated to each plant's need, and pots can be removed for resting periods.

Another thing to be remembered when grouping plants in a large container is their response to light. Many need the normal amount of outdoor light and no more. If kept under artificial light after sundown they may refuse to flower or they make sappy growth. Others will tolerate artificial lighting without serious harm.

Another cause of poor flowering is frequent applications of fertilizer, or "plant food" as it is called now. Too rich a soil causes forced growth, and masses of new growth prevent the formation of flowers.

A lifetime in a pot can be beautiful or miserable for a plant, depending on the owner's knowledge of plant requirements and the care taken to see these requirements are supplied.

Huge oil pipe overcharge

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A federal administrative law judge ruled Friday that the Alaska oil pipeline consortium must refund about $752 million in excessive oil transportation charges to North Slope crude producers.

Judge Max Kane of the Federal Energy Regulatory Administration ruled, in effect, that the pipeline was charging its customers enough to produce a 15 percent rate of return on its investment, when 11.5 percent would have been fair, considering the risks involved in the project.

The commission, which took jurisdiction for the oil pipeline from the Interstate Commerce Commission in 1977, must approve Kane's decision before refunds are made.

A commission representative said any refund the commission directs would flow to North Slope oil producers from the Alyeska Pipeline Service Co., a consortium in which all of the producers participate.

"In the future, there's a possibility the lower costs will translate into lower (retail) prices," she said, "but that's hard to say at this time."

The representative said an immediate beneficiary of the decision would be the state of Alaska, which could expect to receive more money on its 12.5 percent oil royalties.

Federal regulations place a ceiling on the combined price of Alaskan crude oil production and transportation, so a reduction in pipeline rates permits a price hike at the wellhead.

"If the transportation rate decreases and the wellhead price increases, it will result in millions of dollars in extra royalties for Alaska," she said.

Kane found the $6.20 per barrel fee for transporting oil too high partly because it is based on the current pipeline value rather than the original investment.

The 800-mile, $9 billion Alaska oil pipeline, which opened in mid-1977, now carries more than 1.2 million barrels a day of oil from the North Slope to the ice-free port at Valdez.

At the time it was built — from 1974 through 1977 — it was the most expensive single construction project ever undertaken.

The pipeline consortium includes Standard of Ohio, British Petroleum, Atlantic Richfield, Exxon, Mobil, Phillips, Amerada Hess and Union. Sohio, a BP subsidiary, Exxon and Arco are the three main North Slope producers.

FRENCH IMMERSION
Beginning in September, 1980, School District No. 63 (Saanich) will offer a French Immersion Program at the Kindergarten and Grade 1 levels providing there is sufficient enrolment.
Basically immersion implies a classroom in which instruction is given in French by a bi-lingual teacher who is a native speaker of French or who has acquired natural fluency in the French language.
With each successive year a larger proportion of the curriculum is taught in English until a balance is reached between the time devoted to instruction in each language.
Parents should note that no special transportation allowance will be provided.
Before deciding in which school the program is to be located it is necessary to have additional information regarding prospective students. If you plan to enrol your child in the program, please complete the form below and return it by Friday, February 15, 1980 to:

Cook's TB still in doubt

CHILLIWACK (CP) — Doctors said Friday they have not yet confirmed that a cook at Canadian Forces Base Chilliwack was suffering from tuberculosis when he died last December.

David George, 28, died Dec. 14 in a fire in his motel room.

His body was exhumed at the insistence of coroner Gerry Forst and the RCMP because no cause of death was listed and an autopsy showed he might have an active case of tuberculosis.

If the diagnosis of TB is confirmed, those were in contact with the cook or ate in the mess hall where he worked will be given skin tests and x-rays.

Early reports indicated the TB had been confirmed but base medical officer Maj. Ruth McKenzie said further tests will be conducted over the weekend.

Principal injured

PEACHLAND (CP) — An elementary school in this Okanagan community was evacuated Friday and the school principal was injured after fire broke out in the gymnasium.

James Jenkins, principal of Peachland Elementary School, got second-degree burns on his face and hands. There were no other injuries.

Cause of the blaze was not known.

Strings on port project

FERNIE (IPC) — Federal Transport Minister Don Mazankowski said today the Roberts Bank superport will undergo a $477 million expansion in the next two years — provided the British Columbia government agrees to drop ownership claims to Canada's largest coal loading dock.

Mazankowski said construction would begin this year on two additional terminals about 20 hectares (66 acres) in size while the existing causeway would be widened to allow trains to wait at each terminal without blocking access to others.

The long-awaited expansion would triple the capacity of the coal facility to about 30 million tonnes a year in time to meet an increased demand for coal forecast for 1982.

The port now is stretched to full capacity, handling some 10 million tonnes of coal a year.

As late as last week, Premier Bill Bennett and B.C. Economic Development Minister Don Phillips criticized the federal government for delays in expanding the superport, claiming inaction would result in Canada losing out in growing world coal markets.

Industry officials have also pressed for the much-needed expansion.

But Mazankowski said approval for the expansion was "conditional on the federal government holding clear title to the present and future terminal sites."

The provincial and federal governments have been involved in a jurisdictional squabble over who owns the Roberts Bank area. The case currently is before the Supreme Court of Canada.

B.C. government officials were not immediately available for comment on Mazankowski's apparent call for the province to drop its legal action against the federal government.

Mazankowski said every effort would be made to ensure that B.C. would concede ownership of the superport to Ottawa through discussions with the province of B.C., adding he was "encouraged" with meetings held recently with B.C. officials on the issue.

Keep warm when the power goes off.

Last months heavy snow storm knocked out the power on Elm Street. Most houses were so cold that families were huddling in coats and blankets.

But not the Johnsons. They own a Fisher woodstove, and their home is toasty warm. Mrs. Johnson cooked a pot of stew on the stove, and there's plenty of hot coffee. Mr. Johnson bought their Fisher Stove to save money on his heat bill, but now has discovered his Fisher is a better bargain than he'd realized.

Visit your authorized Fisher Stove dealer soon and see the family of Fisher woodstoves. Using a Fisher Stove significantly reduces your heat bill — and protects you from the cold, cruel world.

PATH TO THE CHAMPIONSHIP

The World Chess Federation has announced the draw for the Candidates' Matches, to take place during 1980. The winner of the elimination matches will face Anatoly Karpov in 1981 for the World Championship.

The most interesting matchup is Viktor Korchnoi of Switzerland and Tigran Petrosian of the U.S.S.R. Not only is Korchnoi a defector from the Soviet Union, but his relationship with Petrosian at the best of times was one of animosity. Korchnoi has to be considered a light favorite because he was the winner of the last series. But don't underestimate Petrosian, a former World Champion.

Another former World Champion, Boris Spassky, also of the U.S.S.R., will have his work cut out for him against Lajos Portisch of Hungary. The outcome will depend on Spassky's form, as Portisch is a very consistent competitor.

Barring health problems, the brilliant Mikhail Tal should dispose of his Soviet compatriot Lev Polugaevsky. But Tal's health has always been a question mark.

The final matchup comes as the result of a playoff match between Hungarians Andras Adorjan and Zoltan Ribli. The match ended in a 3-3 tie, but Adorjan gets the nod on tiebreak from the Interzonal tournament.

The pragmatic style, higher rating, and greater experience of West German Robert Hubner make him the favorite. Adorjan takes part in the Candidates' Matches for the first time. — Canadian Chess Federation

Gravel pit noise causes complaint

DUNCAN — A group of angry Shawnigan Lake residents wants the Cowichan Valley Regional District to put a halt to a gravel pit operation in their neighborhood.

Ron Smith, representing 26 residents of the Cameron Taggart and Shawnigan Lake-Mill Bay Road areas, said the gravel pit and cement plant were idle when the residential area was established eight years ago but the operation was recently reactivated.

He presented the CVRD with a petition containing the 26 names.

Smith said neighbors have complained about the noise caused by trucks hauling gravel along Royalta and Cameron Taggart roads as well as the original Mill Bay-Shawnigan Lake access.

"The operator of this pit has shown no regard for the concern of residents who have spoken to him about the noise and physical change in the topography of the land caused by his operations," Smith said.

He also expressed concern for the safety of children along the routes.

The board referred the petition and the planner's report concerning the gravel pit to the planning committee for recommendation back to the CVRD.

AT SOUND HOUNDS WE DON'T SELL EVERYTHING

As you probably know by now, there is an awful lot of stereo equipment in the world. We believe it is our business—and the best kind of business for you and for us—to pick and choose on behalf of our customers. We not only pick the components we feel are the best of their kind but we combine them carefully to make complete stereo systems in various price ranges.

You could probably put on a blindfold and drag practically any combination of components out of our stockroom with pretty good assurance that they would sound at least passable together. But it simply makes sense for us to do the component selection on your behalf. We know which receivers and amplifiers will power which speakers without either straining themselves or overdoing it. We also know what people really value in audio equipment when they get it home and how to reflect their real needs in systems that they can afford.

As a practical matter, we generally pick the speakers in a system first. Then we pick the receiver and turntable. Our choice of a receiver is based on the right amount of power for the speakers, which is the amount that will provide comfortable listening levels without costly excess. We can and do listen to people's particular needs on the spot and sometimes decide on a different receiver (more expensive or less expensive) but it works out that almost all the time our original choice does exactly the right job with given speakers.

Our choice of a turntable is easy. We always fill out a system by picking the best one we can possibly find to fit a given price category. Again, we listen to you, and we are ready to recommend something more or less elaborate than our original choice if it makes sense for your needs. But most people find our choice right on the mark for what they need and what they can afford.

You will have to talk very hard, however, to get us to sell you any system or component in a system that seems marginal for your needs and therefore likely to disappoint you. If you buy a $600 stereo system and your life then changes to the point that you want to fill your house with thousands of dollars of HI-FI gear, that's fine with us. But we won't sell you something we know to be lacking in some respect with the idea of your having to come back sometime for something more expensive.

We didn't go into business to open a showroom in which people would walk around in "supermarket" style and eventually hand us some money. We think that a merchant, especially of goods like ours that can provide so much pleasure if they're chosen correctly, ought to do the best he or she can for the customer. We happen to know that this is the best way to do business in the long run.

That is why ours [illegible] selected systems at various prices. We guarantee all of them explicitly and unmistakeably. And we are confident they represent the best we can do for you.

Thanks for reading.

Never before could you own so much quality for so little money. It begins with the Advent/2 loudspeaker. The least expensive speaker we know of with wide range sound. To do justice to the Advents we chose the incredible Onkyo TX 1500 II and the Connoisseur turntable. Altogether, this is the difference between a passable stereo and a really enjoyable one.

Bizarre mystery of skinned dogs

KELOWNA (CP) — The case of the skinned dogs is baffling RCMP and the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals in this Okanagan city.

Four skinned dogs have been found this week along a road which stretches east from the city to the Big White ski area. Three were found Tuesday and another was spotted Thursday.

The skinned dog found Thursday was different from the others because the carcass was dressed in a toque and scarf and propped up at the side of the road, said inspector Lee Scrivens of the SCPA.

Ms. Scrivens is seeking public help in her investigation of the bizarre findings and RCMP also are checking into the incidents.

Alert Bay MD meetings set

VANCOUVER (CP) — The doctor appointed to conduct an inquiry into delivery of health care to native Indians in remote B.C. communities will hold preliminary talks next week with Indian leaders in Alert Bay.

Skip Brookes, special assistant to Health Minister David Crombie, said in a telephone interview from Ottawa that Dr. Gary Goldforth will be in the remote community on Cormorant Island from Monday to Wednesday.

Brookes said the private meetings with Nimpkish band leaders are aimed at setting mutually-agreeable terms of reference for the one-man inquiry.

Crombie promised the inquiry after a summer visit to Alert Bay where the Nimpkish band was embittered by the deaths of two Indian patients last year after treatment at St. George's Hospital.

Last week, the tiny community's history of medical controversy took another turn when it was discovered that a second doctor who had set up practice only months before was an unqualified, unlicensed imposter. The man was taken into custody by RCMP and later committed suicide in his cell.

Burial site protected

Provincial Secretary Evan Wolfe has stepped into the conflict over logging an area of King Island, west of Bella Coola, where an Indian burial site had been found.

The minister has instructed the director of the Heritage Conservation Branch Thursday to take immediate action to ensure protection of the burial site.

A branch representative will meet with the Bella Bella and Bella Coola Indian Band councils in the next few days, Wolfe said.

Break causes hospital to refuse convicts

ABBOTSFORD (CP) — Prisoners from federal institutions in the Fraser Valley will not be admitted for treatment at MSA General Hospital here unless their lives are in danger, following the escape of a prisoner last week.

Hospital board chairman Marlin Loeppky said Thursday the new policy will stay in effect until the hospital gets some answers as to why the prisoner from Matsqui wasn't manacled and how he managed to smuggle a gun or facsimile into the hospital.

Police said Gary Davie, 21, climbed out of a stretcher, pulled some sort of weapon on the two ambulance attendants and three unarmed prison guards and ran out the door.

RCMP cordoned off the area and captured Davie a short time later. No weapon was found.

Loeppky said the hospital and the federal corrections service reached an agreement last year following an incident in which a Matsqui prisoner stabbed a guard while being escorted to the hospital.

The agreement included tighter security around the movement of prisoners in the hospital.

"We had no choice but to terminate the agreement and the inmates' right to treatment until we can clarify the situation," he said. "They've been coming in for x-rays, labs, that sort of thing, but now they'll have to go to Shaughnessy Hospital (in Vancouver), where there is a regular prisoners' wing.

"Of course, in life-threatening situations, they can still come here."

Man jailed, fined for drugs

A man who sold drugs to bankroll a scrap business was fined $400 and sentenced to an 18-month jail term Friday in Victoria county court.

Judge E.J.C. Stewart was told police seized $3,881 and 3,900 "hits" of LSD, marijuana and liquid hashish after stopping motorcyclist Stephen Frederick Mossip, 20, on a downtown street Dec. 7, 1979.

Mossip pleaded guilty to two counts of possession of marijuana and cannabis, and to possessing LSD, a restricted drug, for the purpose of trafficking.

Police found more than $500, marijuana and cannabis oil and a bag of 300 small papers containing LSD when Mossip was pulled over at Yates and Wharf about 11:30 p.m.

When his home at Sooke was searched the next morning, the rest of the cash, 3,600 hits of LSD and more marijuana were found in the bedroom along with liquid hashish in the refrigerator.

Counsel Derek Brindle said the marijuana was for Mossip's own use but the accused admitted the LSD was to be sold to raise money so he could go into the scrap metal trade.

Brindle said it was to be an isolated transaction and observed that no physical harm had been done since almost all the LSD had been seized.

The court was told Mossip had previous convictions for similar offences, the latest on Feb. 28, 1979, when he received a suspended term and two years' probation.

Mossip has been in custody since Dec. 7.

"It seems to me you have a hopeless case, Mr. Brindle," Stewart said, adding that Mossip is a mature young man of good family background who deliberately chose to make a living in this manner.

"My understanding of the narcotic LSD is that a great deal of harm is done by the distribution of that drug.

"How can I give him a chance?" Stewart said.

First United marks 118 years of service

First United Church celebrates its 118th anniversary at the 11 a.m. service Sunday.

The congregation, founded in 1862, was the first Presbyterian Church in Canada west of the Red River. It became part of the United Church of Canada in 1925, when Methodists, Congregationalists and Presbyterians came together to form one communion.

Today, members of these constituent groups and others from many parts of Canada comprise a strong congregation with a tradition for a warm-hearted and intelligent Christian faith that expresses itself in the everyday world.

Guest preacher on this occasion will be Rev. Rodney Booth, director of broadcasting for the B.C. conference of the United Church, and producer and host of the Pressure Point TV series in Vancouver.

BOOTH

Perspectives

By REV. J.A. DAVIDSON

There is an old story about a man coming out of church one Sunday morning after hearing a scorching sermon on the Ten Commandments. He stops on the walk outside, smiles, and assures himself, "Well, anyway, I've never made a graven image."

Very few of us break the second of the Ten Commandments, "Thou shalt not make unto thee any graven image . . . thou shalt not bow down thyself to them, not serve them." At least, we do not break it in a literal sense; that is, we do not bow down and worship idols carved from stone or metal or wood. We may have trouble with the other nine, but with respect to the graven image one we feel as assured as the man in the story.

The ancient Hebrews recognized that manufactured images could readily come to be regarded not merely as symbols of the holy but as holy in themselves and worthy of the adoration and worship they believed should be reserved for God alone. As their faith developed they sensed that there could be idols other than material ones, idols of idea and belief and attitude.

The early Christians adopted this usage. In the Letter to the Ephesians there is reference to "the greed which makes an idol of gain" (5:5 New English Bible), a matter of making a god of profit. And in the Letter to the Philippians we read about some men for whom "appetite is their god" (3:19 N.E.B.), a condemnation of extreme gluttonly and, perhaps, sexual lust.

We do have a susceptibility to certain kinds of idolatry.

Ideologies readily become idols demanding complete commitment and devotion. Karl Marx criticized, and not without some justification, the bourgeois ideology. But, then, Marxism has itself become an idolatry. And we have seen that that idolatry, that pattern of idol worship, has become the dynamic of a missionary faith that carries out its mission with all the instruments of intimidation and subversion and violence.

Extreme nationalism, making an idol of the nation, has shown itself through history. Mussolini said, "Beyond the State there is nothing." Hitler tried to provide for the German people an idol in the form of a restored state that would master the world. Even in ostensibly democratic nations there is the danger of an idolatrous nationalism: the distinction between wholesome patriotism and idolatrous nationalism is not always clearly drawn.

In our society we have seen in recent years a resurgence of an old idolatry, the idolatry of self that we are now calling "narcissism." A dictionary of psychology defines narcissism as "extreme self-love," and it says that "the excessive preoccupation with oneself and one's concerns is its essential characteristic." That is a partial definition of what the Bible means by the word "sin." That kind of image-graving has become very fashionable, and instruction in the art is now being given in special courses and in easy-to-read paperbacks. In many ways we are becoming a Me Generation, making a god of Self.

"Thou shalt not make unto thee any graven image . . . thou shalt not bow down thyself to them nor serve them." Well?

(Dr. Davidson is minister of Dominion-Chalmers United Church, Ottawa.)

Series examines Jewish contribution

By RABBI HARVEY MARKOWITZ

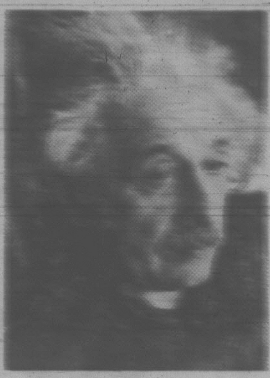
Congregation Emanuel Synagogue of Victoria is sponsoring for the entire community an exciting lecture and performing arts series entitled Portraits of the Jew in the Twentieth Century.

Registration and the first lecture will be on Tuesday at 8 p.m. at the synagogue's school facility, 610 Fort, upstairs from British Importers Ltd.

"Next year in Jerusalem" are the closing words recited by Jews at the Passover Seder. It is a statement of faith and hope that the age-old dream of the Jewish people of world peace, joy and human fulfilment will soon be realized.

This century has not brought Jerusalem. A homeland has been established in Israel, but that meagre plot of land is still wholly beleagered. During the 20th century the Jewish people have had an immense impact on the life and thought of the modern world—the ideas of Jews such as Freud and Einstein have reconstructed human destiny. Yet, in the wake of enlightenment, came darkness and the Holocaust destroying millions of their brethren.

The contribution of this tiny minority to every aspect of 20th century culture has been pervasive. In music—Arnold Schonberg, Richard Rogers; in art—Ameleo Modigliani, Mark Rotho; in literature—Boris Pasternak, Saul Bellow; in entertainment—Barbra Streisand, Barry Manilow; in the performing arts—Vladimir Horowitz, Issac Stern, Beverly Sills; in business—David Sarnoff, Helena Rubinstein; in the sciences—Robert Oppenheimer, Albert Einstein, Jonas Salk; in government—Henry Kissinger, Golda Meir.



EINSTEIN

RUBENSTEIN

These are but a few of the numerous Jews whose names are familiar to us all.

Nevertheless, in many areas throughout the world, Jews are still persecuted and prohibited from practising their religion.

The lectures and lecturers in this series are as diverse as their subject matter.

Dr. Barnett Singer, of the department of history, University of Victoria, will deliver three lectures on alternate weeks on the historical-political scene of 20th century Jewry. Singer will also discuss from a personal view the lighter side of Jewish life.

Rabbi Harvey Markowitz will examine in two lectures the philosophical and religious background of 20th century Jewry.

The rabbi will also discuss Jewish contributions to the 20th century world of the arts, literature and music.

Dr. Harvey Miller of the theatre department of UVic will present a beautiful and exciting evening of dramatic readings by 20th century Jewish playwrights, poets and authors.

The registration fee for the series is $10 a person or $15 a couple for synagogue members and $15 a person and $25 a couple for non-members. For information contact Rabbi Markowitz at 382-0615, after today.

Church controversies expected to continue

Church controversies over sociopolitical issues will continue in the 1980s, says The United Church Observer in an article predicting religious directions in the next decade.

"The 1980s promise to be a tough decade, marked by the money and energy squeeze and by increasing social and political polarization," says Fred McNally, worship consultant for the United Church.

Other church leaders predict more pressure to face United Church relations with other faiths, the learning of a simpler lifestyle through necessity, and the survival of marriage although it may take on new forms.

Air missionary to show and tell

David Voetmann, a flier-mechanic with the Missionary Aviation Fellowship, will share in the 11 a.m. service Sunday at Emmanuel Baptist Church, 2121 Cedar Hill Cross Road.

At 7 p.m. Sunday, he will join in the service at Central Baptist Church, 833 Pandora, after which he will show films of his work.

The California-based fellowship, whose purpose is to "serve the church of Jesus Christ in its total ministry through the use of technology" is interdenominational and arose out of the vision of some Christian airmen in the Second World War.

They use planes to ferry missionaries, supplies and ambulances into remote areas, operating about 120 light aircraft and six helicopters worldwide.

The volunteer pilots must support themselves and their families while the fellowship raises funds to purchase equipment and build hangars and houses overseas.

church chronicles

Rev. Rolf Lyshoej, accompanied by his wife Dorothea, visited the Parish of St. Athanasius of the Anglican Catholic Church last week, giving the Victoria congregation a brief history of the Swedish Church and explaining the purpose of his visit to North America.

Lyshoej, chaplain to the Swedish royal household, said the church had always had close ties with the Church of England, noting that English missionaries were the first to plant Christianity firmly in Sweden around 1000 AD.

When the Reformation reached Northern Europe, the Swedish Church embraced the Confession of Augsburg and entered the Lutheran fold, while retaining their Catholic worship and ministry with the apostolic succession of their bishops being unimpaired.

Lyshoej said government control over the church, to which 90 per cent of Swedes belong, has been increasing and the apostolic succession is now being threatened. He said he came to Canada and the U.S. to gain firsthand knowledge of how Anglicans in both countries have faced up to the same problems.

In particular, he was interested to see how those congregations in the traditionalist Episcopal and Anglican churches were facing up to opposition from the two established churches.

He told members of St. Athanasius that they, with those worldwide who are standing firm in their traditional Catholic heritage, are laying the foundation for a resurgence of the faith.

The Society of St. Vincent de Paul will hold its annual general meeting at its new Royal Oak workshop and receiving centre at 4353 West Saanich at 7 p.m. Thursday.

Love band returning to Victoria

The Love Chapter Band will be back in the Victoria area next week. This seven-member group has travelled B.C. and the Yukon singing contemporary Christian music and holding children's meetings. During this past year they have cut a record that is being played all over Canada and the United States.

They return Wednesday for the third time to Oldfield Road Gospel Chapel, corner of Old West Saanich and Oldfield Roads.

Wednesday, Thursday and Friday from 6:30 to 7:30 p.m. will be Space Days kids programs. Saturday night is a fourth concert at 7:30 p.m. and the closing day is Sunday, Feb. 10, with a family concert at 6 p.m.

All activities are free. For information and rides phone 479-6237.

Pope expounds on nudity

VATICAN CITY (UPI) — Pope John Paul II said Wednesday that the Bible always connected nudity with shame except in the unique case of Adam and Eve.

Speaking at his weekly general audience in the Vatican's modernistic Nervi auditorium, the white-robed pontiff continued his series of discourses on the significance of the body and original innocence.

Two weeks ago he said, "The human body, with its sex, its masculinity and femininity, is not only intended for fecundity and procreation, but for its capacity to express love."

He referred Wednesday to Genesis 2:2, which describes Adam and Eve as being naked and unashamed before they ate the fruit of the tree of knowledge.

Said the pontiff: "It is significant that the affirmation in Genesis 2:25 concerning mutual nakedness free of shame is a unique enunciation of its kind throughout the whole Bible, and is never repeated. On the contrary, we can quote many texts in which nakedness is linked to shame or directly, in an even stronger way, to ignominy."

A footnote to his prepared remarks said that nakedness "in the sense of lack of clothes, meant in the ancient Middle East the abjection of men deprived of freedom: slaves, prisoners of war or the condemned, of those not enjoying the protection of law."

The note added: "The nakedness of women was considered a disgrace."

The pope said that man, through history, "has sought to understand the mystery of original innocence almost by contrast, that is to say going back to the experience of his own guilt and his own sinfulness."

He said that original innocence "excludes shame of the body in man-woman relations, eliminates the need for it by man, in his heart, in his conscience."

The fact that man was now separated from this condition through original sin did not mean, said the pope, that he could not approach the initial state of innocence through the grace of God and "pureness of heart," a mutual giving between man and woman without egoism.

The pope said he would return to the subject in future discourses.

POPE JOHN PAUL

Baptists to hear La Paz minister

Sheila Buchanan, missionary from La Paz, Bolivia, will speak at several of the Baptist Union churches of Victoria, Feb. 7 to 10.

Miss Buchanan holds a B.A. and B.S.A. degree from the University of British Columbia. She was holding a secretarial position at the University of B.C. when she volunteered for missionary service with the Canadian Baptist Overseas Mission Board.

After studying Spanish in Cochabamba, Bolivia, she was appointed mission treasurer for the Bolivian Baptist Union in 1967. She has been on the executive of the Bolivian Baptist Union and on the executive of the Bolivian Baptist Women's Association.

Miss Buchanan will speak at a luncheon meeting at Emmanuel Baptist Church on Thursday; at Elk Lake Baptist Church Saturday afternoon; at Douglas Street Baptist on Sunday morning, Feb. 10, and at Western Community Baptist Sunday evening.

65 Cubans barge to U.S.

MIAMI (AP) — A band of 65 Cubans stepped on to United States soil Friday after a daring nighttime escape from their homeland in a leaking, slow-moving barge hijacked at gunpoint.

Waving from portholes and doorways, men and women who risked years in Cuban prisons in hopes of winning political asylum in the United States smiled as a U.S. Coast Guard cutter guided the battered 30-metre dredging barge to a pier at a coast guard base.

With the refugees was a sullen man who said he was captain of the hijacked barge, the Fifth of December. He and his crew had been tied up during the more than 12 hours it took the barge to cross the 195 kilometres of ocean from the port city of Cardenas to near Islamorada in the Florida Keys.

"I was bound and gagged at the point of a gun and that's the way they took me," he told reporters as he was hustled to a bus with his former captors to interviews with immigration officials. He would not give his name.

The refugee group included 10 children.

Orlando Lopez, 31, one of the 65 refugees, said the escape was planned over a five-month period. He said the operation began at a dock in Varadero beach near Cardenas about 10 p.m. Wednesday, when armed members of the band commandeered the barge.

Lopez gave no details of the takeover, but U.S. officials said six of the refugees were armed.

He said the vessel ran aground soon after the voyage began. "We pointed the gun at the crewmen and made them (free) the boat with with the help of the crane," he said, referring to a dredging crane on the vessel's deck.

Lopez did not explain the manoeuvre, but a coast guard spokesman said it was conceivable that swinging the crane could have rocked the barge off a sandbar.

Cuban refugees regularly arrive in south Florida after journeys across the Gulf Stream. Friday's group probably was the largest in at least five years, said Richard Gullage, deputy director of the U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service in Miami.

However, officials were not sure if this group would be treated differently in light of the way they had escaped. "At this particular point, we're not even willing to comment on that," Gullage said. "The question is being studied in Washington."

A U.S.-Cuban treaty requiring the return of hijackers lapsed in 1976, but hijacked planes and vessels customarily are sent back, as are involuntary passengers and crew members.

Playboy pays up to actress

CHICAGO (UPI) — Playboy Magazine will pay actress Suzanne Somers $10,000 — and publisher Hugh M. Hefner will give her a diamond — for a nude layout of the actress which appeared in the magazine's February issue, a spokesman says.

The pictures were shot in Mexico several years ago as a test and remained in Playboy's photo files until they were discovered recently — after the actress had become a television star.

"Technically, we don't owe her a fee for the original test," Gary Cole, photographic director for Playboy, said Friday. "But we were so pleased with the way the thing turned out that we felt she deserved the same fee Playmates are usually paid."

A spokesman said Hefner already has selected a "large" diamond as added compensation for Miss Somers.

U.K. bugging HQ unmasked

By NIKKI FINKE

LONDON (AP) — An innocent-looking post office in London's Chelsea district has been unmasked as the nerve centre of a widespread government telephone-bugging operation, code-named Tinkerbell. Angry foes of the program are demanding that "Big Brother" stop listening.

Published reports say the eavesdropping was carried on in secret for 30 years by British intelligence services, and may have been used to spy on domestic political targets, including British union leaders.

The liberal weekly New Statesman blew the whistle in an article this week by telecommunications expert Duncan Campbell, 27.

"Phone tapping is a grey area of the law, and police and security are exploiting it," Campbell wrote.

Now members of Parliament are calling for a major review of government-ordered electronic bugging, and the House of Commons is speeding up plans to impose new controls over phone taps.

But the parliamentary debate will have little effect in silencing the public protests over Tinkerbell. The British press is likening it to the outcry in the United States over Richard Nixon's White House taping system.

"Free countries can't use the weapons of oppressors," The Daily Mirror says in an editorial. "Nixon fell because he was discovered doing what everyone knows (Soviet President Leonid) Brezhnev does as a matter of routine.

"What is automatic in a totalitarian society ought to be the exception in a democratic one. The government now has a duty to prove that it still is."

Home Secretary William Whitelaw told MPs Thursday that the bugging was "a vital weapon in combatting serious crime, including drug smuggling and terrorism."

But the New Statesman report said there was a lot of eavesdropping going on that the home office knew nothing about.

"Home and office numbers of union leaders and others involved in major industrial disputes are frequently, even routinely, tapped," the report said.

"One of the essential discoveries that the Americans made during the '70s was that the burgeoning activities of the 'intelligence community' — wiretapping, mail-opening, and the like — were targeted, in reality, not against the external enemies of the United States, but against the American public itself," Campbell wrote.

"That is a painful discovery we are beginning to make in this country. But whether we have the same legal and constitutional means for investigating it is perhaps another question."

Whitelaw did not deny that thousands of telephone lines were monitored every year. He said the results were supplied chiefly to MI5, Britain's counter-espionage agency, and to Scotland Yard's Special Branch.

The actual operation sounds like something from a James Bond movie script.

It goes on in a sealed area of the post office's equipment development division.

"Where Big Brother has you on tap," the Daily Mirror reported, showing a picture of the undistinguished five-storey building.

About 90 government postal workers keep the centre running 24 hours a day with a computer bank that can monitor more than 1,000 lines simultaneously and turn out a printed text of a telephone conversation, said Campbell, who was convicted 14 months ago of breaking the Official Secrets Act by receiving information about British communications intelligence.

He said that in at least one case of politically motivated wiretapping, a bug was attached to the telephone used by the union strike committee in violence-plagued 1977 walkout at a photo-processing company in northwest London.

Before the judge

Two of four charges against Kaleidoscope Theatre Productions Society and administrator Colin Gorrie were dismissed Friday by Judge Fred Green.

Green ruled in favor of defence lawyer David Lisson's no-evidence motion.

However, two others remained and the judge remanded the case until next Friday for a decision on whether Gorrie can be held responsible along with the society.

The society and Gorrie were charged with erecting a hall for public assembly without submitting plans to the fire marshall and erecting a tent contrary to city by-laws between June 26 and July 6.

The other charges were opening a tent July 13 without inspection and approval in writing and using a tent for public assembly July 14 contrary to the same city by-laws.

Green threw out the first two charges but dismissed Lisson's motion on the last two.

Theft of a city tree Dec. 20 resulted in a suspended sentence for a 19-year-old youth.

Howard Lorie Bruner, of 1045 Balmoral, pleaded guilty to theft under $200 and was given the suspended sentence, along with six months probation and 50 hours of community service work.

Crown counsel Nicholas Lang told Ostler that Victoria police stopped Bruner about 2:50 a.m. as he was walking north on Cook Street with a small tree.

He admitted to officers he took the tree from Beacon Hill Park because he wanted a live Christmas tree.

Fined for drinking-driving offences were: Edward Steven Jackson, 24, of 647 Michigan, $450; [illegible] Robert Fraser, 17, of 4406 Chartwell, $400; and Geoffrey Brian Trim, 18, of 3702 Duke, $50.

Trim was also placed on six months probation and ordered to perform 75 hours of community service work.

Driver drops in — it's a wreck room!

James Edmond Denman had no intention of dropping in on the Martinez family Friday morning.

Both now wish he hadn't.

City police said Denman, 60, of 1116 North Park was driving home shortly after 1 a.m. when he lost control of his car rounding a corner at Cross and Niagara streets.

The car clipped a fence, roared up a driveway and smashed into the side of a house at 1425 Niagara.

Jose Martinez and his family were asleep inside.

But not for long.

They woke up to find a third of the vehicle hanging inside their basement.

Denman received only minor cuts in the mishap which caused about $5,000 damage to house and car.

By ISAAC WILLIAMS

Canadian music: What does that title conjure up in your mind? A lot of dull, repetitive heavy metal boogie bands, perhaps, or undistinctive, anemic looking singers doing cover versions of British and U.S. hits. About the best praise most Canadian performers receive is that they sound almost as good as so and so.

I've spent the past few weeks searching for some good, original Canadian records and I am now almost afraid of those little maple leafs indicating that this is a Canadian album, be warned. The biggest problem is that most Canadian music is unimaginative and uninspiring but I have found some exceptions. My next few columns will deal with Canada's best, the performers and albums that prove there is some creativity in The Canadian musical climate.

Paiement

There is one group that stands out from the rest, Cano, for they best portray what it means to be a Canadian performer. The group are based in Sudbury and are bilingual, shifting between French and English lyrics with ease. Their songs reflect the Canada that they have seen in all the miles that they have toured across the country while their music creates a vastness that is usually only found in Canadian literature.

The seven piece Cano can best be called a folk group that mixes acoustic and electric instruments. Their music is light and flowing featuring the sustained violin playing of Wasyl Kohut and this is their most distinctive instrument. There is something about the violin that captures the wide open emptiness that makes up most of this country.

The vocals alternate between Rachel Paiement, who sings beautifully whether in French or English and Marcel Aymar, who in English sounds somewhat like Steely Dan. On Cano's newest album Rendezvous his songs Clown Alley and Floridarity Forever contain the same sarcasm that made Steely Dan famous. The latter song is about the Canadian love affair with Florida, "Come to Florida and live forever before you die," One of the strengths of Cano is that every member contributes to the writing and that diversity keeps the records interesting. On Rendezvous there are two Rachel Paiement love songs, a piano piece by Michael Kendel, two songs from violinist Kohut that are mostly instrumental and finally the best song on the album written by bassist John Doerr. The song, Mimie Artist, is a great example of how Cano can take a theme and repeat and build it up like a small orchestra till it flows like waves over the listener. Simple but very effective.

On their third album Eclipse there are more French lyrics and for that reason the album seems slightly better than Rendezvous. The French language seems to flow better with Cano's music. Eclipse also features two songs written by Rachel Paiement's brother Andre who killed himself before the album was recorded. One song Bienvinue 1984 is a master piece, an Orwellian glimpse of Canada 1984. It is Cano's best moment, played as a dedication to its writer and full of studio tehniques and sounds that would make even Pink Floyd envious. For some real Canadian music try Eclipse and Rendezvous and then investigate the first two CANO albums Tous dans l'Meme Bateau and Au Nord de Notre Vie.

Be ready for next week's column on the Canadian new wave, you may be surprised.

(Isaac Williams lives in Parksville on Vancouver Island and writes this column for some 50 Canadian weekly and daily newspapers.)

Eighteenth century wind instruments take the spotlight at a concert Sunday, Feb.10 at St.John' Anglican Church on Quadra. The instruments are all original or authentic reproductions of the originals from the time of Mozart and Haydn.

Under the direction of Jesse Read who conducts and teaches bassoon at the University of Victoria School of Music, a program of music by Mozart, Haydn, Handel, Telemann, Fiala, Holzbauer and Masek, with interpolated discussion, will be performed by The Little Band. This ensemble consists of oboes, horns, bassoons and harpsichord.

Leading members of the ensemble are David Dutton, principal oboist with the Spokane Symphony and a member of Seattle's Pro Musica and Cecilian Ensemble; Sand Dalton, former oboist with the Los Angeles Chamber Orchestra, known throughout the world as a maker of fine reproduction baroque instruments, and Read, a former member of the San Francisco and Metroplitan Opera national companies, who studies and performs widely in Europe on the baroque and classical bassoon.

The concert begins at 8 p.m.

A first student performance is being mounted by the Camosun College Theatre Program. The play is Sophocles' Electra. It will take place at the Carey Road Campus Thursday, Friday and Saturday at 8 p.m.

The address is 3814 Carey and admission is free.

Artistic director Myra Benson says audiences will be welcome as a vital part of the theatre experience. But seating is limited and it would be appreciated if anyone planning to attend would phone Camosun College, 592-1281, local 308, (Dale Todd) to indicate which night would be preferred.

National Film Board showings this week continue the Creative and Performing Arts series at noon Wednesdays at McPherson Playhouse. This week's program includes I Don't Have to Work That Big, about a Saskatchewan artist who sculpts miniatures of cows and people; Correlieu, the works of Canadian painter Ozia Leduc; Images: Stone: B.C.; Halifax Music, parts I and II, and a study of Northwest Coastal Indian artist Bill Reid in the Charlottes.

audrey johnson

At the NFB Wharf Street theatre, screening at noon on Friday will comprise the 58 minute filming of the Canadian play, Paper Wheat. It's about Saskatchewan's early settlers and the co-op movement they established.

Admission to both series is free.

Morocco is 1,500 miles of Atlantic and Mediterranean beaches, the snow-topped Atlas Mountains, camel caravans, the Sahara, oases, mosques and modern cities.

It's a country where ageless tradition lives on, oblivious to the 20th Century. Morocco is also a travel movie set for the McPherson Playhouse on Monday.

Show times are 2:30, 6 and 8 p.m.

The celluloid trip will whisk you to Casablanca, to flower-filled Rabat and the Royal Palace, to Spanish Chaouen and finally, to where the road ends, at Zagora.

Next stop: Timbuctoo, 52 days away by camel. Tickets available at the auditorium box office.

Morocco unfolds for Victorians at the McPherson Monday

Richard Burton — filming his new movie, Circle of Two in Toronto — waxed philosophical between takes. Says he, "Life can be terribly unfair. Just when I look younger and better than I've looked for years, I'm playing a burnt-out old man." But he admits there are compensations. With a nod to beautiful costar Tatum O'Neal — who quit being a child actress some time ago — he says, "Life can also be very lucky."

Donna Summer says Casablanca Records took advantage of her "physical and emotional illness" — not to mention her naivete in business matters — when it signed her to a long contract in 1977, and she wants out. Donna — now the richest superstar on the disco scene — is suing Casablanca and its president, Neil Bogart. But she won't discuss the case — says, "I'll leave the lawyering to my lawyers if they'll leave the singing to me."

When songstress Anne Murray signed to co-host five segments of The Mike Douglas Show she never figured she'd be doing it without her clothes. The airline took care of that — losing her luggage en route from Toronto to Los Angeles. For a solid week, the question of what she'd wear the next day became a running joke — manifested at one time when a small trunk — allegedly courtesy of the offending airline — was trundled onstage. But all it contained was a young woman who emerged asking if she'd reached Buffalo yet. The wardrobe is still missing.

Anne Murray . . . 'sings without clothes

Her looks may rate a 10, but Bo Derek's performance on location at Bennington, Vt., rates nearer a zero from many working with her. Derek is starring in Noel Black's film, A Change of Season, with Shirley MacLaine and Anthony Hopkins. Crew members claim Derek has refused to participate in some rehearsals, has held up shooting while husband John fixes her mascara and has acted in a manner unbecoming to a professional. Some believe Derek's husband is responsible for his wife's prima donna behavior. One production worker said: Derek is "always trying to gain the upper hand with Bo and the picture."

As a general rule, opera stars hit the high notes. But Glenys Fowles is right up there with the best of the "run-that-past-me-again" quipsters. Says the Australian soprano — who is doing Falstaff at New York City Opera — "Having children is hereditary — if your parents had no children, chances are you won't either."

Curiosity spurs big-hearted Burt

By LES WEDMAN

MONTREAL — He's performed on a trapeze with Gina Lollobrigida and commanded a submarine with Clark Gable. He's become a master in the art of training birds and quite accomplished in the field of train robbery. He's jumped from planes, preached to devoted followers, been judged a war criminal by Spencer Tracy, been assassinated along with the president of the United States. He has just completed a motion picture in Montreal and come spring, everything going as scheduled, he'll do another one in Vancouver.

The "he" in question is Burt Lancaster, an actor who has played many different roles in more than 70 movies with one constant result — success. Now 66 years old, Lancaster thinks getting older is simply a diminishing of curiosity. "As long as you are curious you defeat age," he believes.

The movie he just completed in Canada is Atlantic City U.S.A., in which he plays Lou, an aging small-time hood who's been living on the fringes of the Atlantic City underworld for 40 years. He wakes up one day trying to figure out how to make a buck now that everything that has been illegal suddenly becomes legal.

The film, a Franco-Canadian co-production, was directed by French filmmaker Louis Malle, who still hasn't recovered from the problems he had in Ontario with his controversial movie, Pretty Baby, that starred Brooke Shields as a child prostitute and Susan Sarandon as her mother, also a prostitute. Susan Sarandon co-stars in Atlantic City U.S.A. with Lancaster and Canada's Kate Reid. To Louis Malle, doing his first film in Canada, the most important part of directing is choosing the right actors. Casting, he thinks, is 60 per cent of any performance.

Lancaster has never worked with Malle but he is no stranger to European films. He starred in The Leopard and Conversation Piece for Luchino Visconti and was also in 1900 for Bernardo Bertolucci.

The actor who has seduced four decades of moviegoers around the world with his aggressive masculinity and rugged good looks got his start in showbusiness as a small-time circus acrobat. He spent seven years under the big top before graduating to floor-walking in the lingerie department of a large Chicago store.

His movie debut was in Robert Siodmak's The Killers. The film and its star were hits and Lancaster never looked back. Within two years, according to Edward G. Robinson, with whom he co-starred, Lancaster was already showing "that animal vitality and suppressed volcano inside that inevitably made him a star."

By 1948, Lancaster's name was said to be worth a million dollars to the box-office and that year he tried producing. His first film, Kiss the Blood Off My Hands, barely broke even but it established him as a man determined to control his own destiny.

In 1949, Lancaster agreed to return to the circus for four weeks. When he'd retired from aerial acrobatics he'd been making $36 a week. When he went back he got $11,000 per week. Then he returned to Hollywood to establish without any doubt that he was a superb actor but he shocked the movie business again by trying his hand at directing. The film was The Kentuckian and it was an artistic failure. Says Lancaster "Long ago I learned it's no trick to be a director. The tough job is being a good director." It took him nearly 20 years to regain his courage to direct.

He won an Oscar for his electrifying performance as Elmer Gantry in 1960, won other nominations and critics' awards for Birdman of Alcatraz, and From Here to Eternity. He's had his own film company that produced Marty, the 1955 Academy Awards' sleeper; and later produced Run Silent, Run Deep with Clark Gable and then The Devil's Disciple with Laurence Olivier and Kirk Douglas.

Despite his macho image, Lancaster has a sensitive nature that leads him to impassioned films about the underdogs of life, the poor, the oppressed and the victims of prejudice. While in Europe making The Train in 1963 for John Frankenheimer, Lancaster took sudden leave to fly back to the U.S. for a day to join in Dr. Martin Luther King's civil rights march on Washington. He also loves opera and it's nothing for him to fly to New York and head straight for The Met from the airport and then fly home.

After such a long career with no signs of slowing down, Lancaster's enthusiasm for acting has diminished somewhat but he says he will retire only when he agrees to do a role in a movie and then finds out he doesn't like it.

Imports for opera

A first major departure marks the Pacific Opera Association's magnum opus of the 1979-80 season.

With the production of Puccini's La Boheme this month, the POA steps into the realm of the truly "Grand Opera". On top of which it is bringing its first artists from outside to fill the major roles.

Paul Freeman will conduct the Victoria Symphony core and the cast in four performances that start Feb.21 at McPherson Playhouse.

Soprano Margarita Noye of Vancouver, who is to sing the role of Gilda in the Vancouver Opera's forthcoming Rigoletto, will sing Mimi. Rudolfo will be sung by New York tenor Aaron Bergell, and Marcello by Seattle Opera's Donald Collins. Victoria's Karen Smith is to sing Musetta.

Stage direction is by Peter Mannering.

On Sunday the POA is conducting a day-long symposium at the Empress Hotel. It will be chaired by operatic conductor Timothy Vernon and the guest speaker at the lunch break will be T.G. Fielding, director of B.C. Cultural Services.

Panel discussions will be conducted under repertoire, dramatic direction for opera and stagecraft.

NOYE
... will sing Mimi

Step series coming

Dance, its early phases and later development; the dancer's body and training; classical choreography; costumes and famous ballets and dancers will be examined in a fascinating series of lectures, demonstrations and films during the next few weeks.

The scene will be the YM/YWCA and the series has been arranged by the Vancouver Island Ballet Society in conjunction with the Y's Leisure Arts Program.

The series will take place on Thursday evenings beginning next week. Registration can be made at the 'Y'. The fee is $15 for 'Y' or Ballet Society members, $25 for non-members.

The first lecture is entitled The Beginnings of Ballet, and it will be presented by Dr. Erich Schwandt, University of Victoria School of Music. It is concerned with origins of ballet steps and positions, with demonstration of early court dances.

Dance on Film (Feb.14) will include a 1924 film of Pavlova performing famous solos including the Dying Swan. The silent feature will be presented by film historian Charles Hoffman.

On Feb.21 the subject will be the training of a dancer. For this evening a panel of teachers will answer questions about dance training from pre-ballet to professional level.

Dance in B.C. Today (March 6) will have Richard Marcuse, author of a 1979 report on modern dance and ballet, discussing the subject assisted by dancer-choreographer Judith Marcuse.

A full-length film of Giselle, with Karen Kain, Frank Augustyn and the National Ballet will be shown on March 13 and on March 20 Ingrid Wolsk, former New York designer, will give an illustrated talk on the history of costume for dance.

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! SASKATCHEWAN and ALBERTA
A TRIBUTE TO OUR PIONEERS

COLLECTORS ALBUM

Hardship, despair, vision and triumph — our pioneers have experienced them all. For three-quarters of a century these conditions have mingled to bring the West full circle; from her colorful past we enjoy the success of today and anticipate the future with hope.

It is with this theme in mind that these albums have been produced in honor of the courageous pioneers who had a dream and saw it fulfilled.

The Saskatchewan Story

GIFT IDEA

Two years in the making. These stories take you back to the beginning of our Provinces. Listen while Stan Sparling takes you through the early days of the first settlers. The rebellion, the Depression, follow the pioneers as they tame the West.

Saskatchewan or Alberta Story both are avilable on LP record, 8-track and cassette, at $8.95 each plus tax and 50¢ handling.

around the galleries

A new show going up at the Art Gallery of Greater Victoria, Tuesday, is a kind of essay on a vanishing people by a celebrated photographer — Edward Curtis.

As a young man living near Puget Sound, Curtis realized that he was witnessing the passing of the North American Indian. In fact, by the year 1930 there were few visible traces of the peoples that were once the sole occupants of this continent. No civilization that we know of has ever been removed in so short a time, so completely.

This selection of Curtis's cyanotype contact prints, silver prints and photogravure reproductions is essentially a fascinating and accurate record of Coast Indian life.

The exhibition portrays life among the Cowichan, Nootka, Haida and Kwakiutl. It will continue on view through March 2.

Large-scale abstract paintings by Victoria artists form a new exhibition at Open Space Gallery, 510 Fort. It opens formally Tuesday and all interested persons are welcome between the hours of 8 p.m. and 10 p.m.

The painters involved are Ken Meisterman Rob Youds and Jean-Jacques Roussin. Urban Spaces, photographs by David Lee, will also be on view. The exhibition closes March 1.

A collection of modern German prints in drypoint, silkscreen, woodcut and serigraph by Helmut Kies, Gunter Grass, Heinrich Richter and others, promise an interesting new show at the Backroom Gallery, 2070 Oak Bay.

In conjunction with it is an exhibit of West Coast ceramics by some of this area's most outstanding potters. Included are Walter Dexter, Jan and Helga Grove, Robin Hopper, Linda Mackie, Wayne Ngan and Robin Righton. These parallel shows will continue through March 8.

ADVANCE PUBLIC NOTICE LOAD RESTRICTIONS

Pursuant to Section 27 of the "Highway Act", notice is hereby given that load restrictions may be placed, on short notice in the near future, on all highways in the following Highway Districts: Nanaimo, Saanich, Port Alberni and Courtenay. Restrictions will be imposed in each District individually, as conditions warrant, normally the most westerly and southerly areas to be restricted first.

The restrictions will limit vehicles to 70% or 50% of legal axle weights, as allowed under the regulations pursuant to the Ministry of Energy, Transport and Communications Act. Overweight permits will not be granted. All existing weight permits will be cancelled. Other restrictions may be imposed as necessary.

The public, and trucking and transportation companies, should govern themselves accordingly.

Your co-operation in adhering to the above regulations will be appreciated.

A FEW THINGS YOU SHOULD KNOW ABOUT RENT CONTROLS,

Because of the current low vacancy rates, it's important to understand your rights under the Residential Tenancy Act. Most tenants have protection against excessive rent increases.

1 7% IS STILL THE LIMIT.
The 7% maximum increase is still in effect, and there are no plans for further de-control while the present vacancy rate prevails. This means that, subject to the exceptions stated below, if you're currently paying $300 or less for a one-bedroom, $350 or less for a two-bedroom, or $400 or less for a three-bedroom unit your rent cannot be increased by more than 7% per year. Units renting for more than these amounts are not subject to the 7% limit.

2 THERE ARE SOME OTHER EXCEPTIONS.
Units which are exempt from the 7% limit include the following:
(a) Premises other than those in mobile home parks first rented after January 1st, 1974;
(b) Premises that the Rent Review Commission determine have been substantially renovated;
(c) Premises that have been owner-occupied for 24 consecutive months since January 1st, 1972;
(d) Owner-occupied duplexes;
(e) University residences, non-profit societies, summer cottages, winter chalets and housing managed by B.C. Housing Commission;
(f) Premises for which the Rent Review Commission approves additional rent increases.

3 SOME RENT INCREASES MAY BE SUBJECT TO REVIEW.
If you're paying $500 or less per month, but are not covered under the 7% limit, you may still be protected against excessive rent increases. You may determine if you are eligible for a review by contacting the Rent Review Commission within 30 days after you receive a notice of the increase.

4 ALL RENT INCREASES MUST BE GIVEN IN THE PROPER FORM.
If your rent is being increased, your landlord must give you 3 months' notice, and the notice must be given on the official form supplied by the Rent Review Commission. A copy must also be sent to the Rent Review Commission by the landlord. This applies to ALL rent increases, even those exempt from the 7% limit.

NOTE:
The Provincial Rentalsman, Jim Patterson, advises anyone having a rental problem to attempt to resolve it by contacting their landlord or tenant prior to calling the Office of the Rentalsman. This may save you valuable time during this peak period of tenant and landlord queries.

FURTHER INFORMATION AND "NOTICE OF RENT INCREASE" FORMS ARE AVAILABLE BY WRITING OR CALLING:

Raves prolong Da

With a steady incidence of sold-out houses since its opening, Jan.24, The Belfry Theatre has announced that Hugh Leonard's acclaimed Tony Award-winning Irish play, Da, will be held over at the Gladstone Avenue theatre for one additional week, ending Feb. 16.

Directed by Carl Hare, Da presents a fascinating blend of comedy and pathos brilliantly acted by noted Canadian star Bernard Behrens in the title role, and a strong cast including Lawrence Benedict, Florence Paterson, Bill Hosie, Joe Ziegler, Peter Brockington, Nancy Palk and Margaret Barton.

This production has won rave notices in all media and has been described unanimously by Victoria critics as a "must-see." It is undoubtedly destined to be a headliner of the entire season.

Elat emerges as Red Sea winter wonderland

Top Israeli tourist resort undergoes transformation

ELAT, ISRAEL — This Red Sea port, Israel's largest winter resort, has welcomed its annual winter influx of visitors after an unprecedented facelift.

The Elat Foreshore Development Company, an agency of the Ministry of Industry, Trade and Tourism, has spent $2 million on beautification projects and in creating new facilities, mostly in the hotel and beach areas of the town.

The hotel area has undergone a metamorphosis with the planting of a new park, while 1,200 palm trees and additional greenery have sprouted between hotels and along the beaches.

Roads to hotels and the beach have been attractively landscaped. An experimental model beach has been laid out along a 250-yard stretch fronting the hotels, while a new beach is being planned to the east of the existing facilities.

Previous visitors to Elat will hardly recognize the new appearance of the resort town.

Many will arrive on charter flights direct to Elat from various European cities and meet the first improvement on arrival at Etzion Airport, where a new international terminal has been constructed.

Passengers will be welcomed with a sip of Israel's Sabra liqueur, a package of dates and a compact Hebrew phrasebook printed on an attractive fan. Elat residents understand their town's reliance on tourism and workers in tourist services receive guidance in their contacts with tourists.

In the current winter season, which lasts until April, Elat has 11 charter flights from various European centres each week, as well as seven special flights. These were expected to bring 30,000 vacationers compared with 20,000 last winter. The charter flights originate in the Scandinavian countries, Britain, Germany and Austria.

Elat's climate makes it ideal for a winter vacation; the days are warm with temperatures in the 20s and 30s and there is barely any humidity. The Red Sea is renowned for its brilliance and many experts consider the scuba and skin-diving the best and most accessible in the world.

Apart from the various charter tours operating from Europe, most North Americans arrive in Elat by air from Tel Aviv or Jerusalem (a 50-minute flight), or drive the scenic desert road to the Red Sea.

Elat has 22 hotels, most located on or near the beach, with a total of 2,200 rooms. The largest hotel, the four-star Laromme Elat, has 300 rooms; other four-star hotels include the Caesar (152 rooms), Moriah Elat (107 rooms), Neptune (100 rooms), Queen of Sheba (92 rooms), Red Rock (116 rooms), Shulamit Gardens (209 rooms).

Four star hotel rates in Elat are about $40 per day for two including a large Israeli breakfast a bargain by any standard.

Queen Victoria fell in love with Inverlochy Castle deep in the Scottish Highlands

'TIS A BONNY WEE SPOT

Scottish castles have opened their gates to North American visitors.

Guests can relax in four-poster beds and feast on fine Scottish cuisine in homes built for dukes and earls hundreds of years ago.

Visitors join some distinguished guest lists. Edward I, Henry IV, Oliver Cromwell and Queen Victoria are some of the people entertained at Dalhousie Castle during the last 700 years. Queen Victoria also stopped at Inverlochy Castle and wrote, "I never saw a lovelier or more romantic spot."

Guests dine in style. One castle offers an 18th century banquet, and another serves an a la carte menu by candlelight in the dungeon. Guests at Prestonfield House dine among the same 17th century tapestries and Persian carpets, as did Bonnie Prince Charlie over 200 years ago.

The castles offer fresh meat and game from their estates, and fish from their private salmon rivers. And the bill for all this regal hospitality is around $50 per person per night.

For those preferring a simpler life, by the shores of a loch or up a mountain glen, there are hundreds of country guest houses all over Scotland's highlands and islands.

There is an old, thatched inn on the Isle of Skye, called Eilean Iarmain where the staff still speak Gaelic. It has its own private harbor and a boat for mackerel fishing.

All these houses privide "wholesome Scottish food" and sometimes "a stock of malt and blended whiskies."

Bed and breakfast averages $12.

Copies of Scottish Castle and Country House Holidays, 1980 are available for $6.50 (plus $1 for postage and handling) from Sue Unwin, P.O. Box 8878, Moscow, Idaho 83843.

Passengers detrain from Amtrak Superliner rail cars . . . patronage is on the up

America gets into training with big gains on Amtrak

CHICAGO — Amtrak's train, the Inter-American, which links 16 Texas cities with Chicago and the Middle West, has made the largest passenger gains of any train in the United States rail system since the Amtrak Reorganization Act went into effect last Oct. 1.

Amtrak showed a gain of 6.89 per cent patronage during the first month after the reorganization despite a cutback of more than 14 per cent in national route mileage. Gain for the Inter-American, which now includes part of the route of the discontinued Lone Star, was 67.72 per cent.

The Inter-American runs for 1,452 miles from Chicago to the Mexican border city of Laredo. Major stops on this route include St. Louis, Little Rock, Dallas, Fort Worth, Austin and San Antonio. The train now splits at Temple, Tex., with one section going to Houston while the rest of the train continues to Laredo.

Part of the big gain in ridership was due to the inclusion on the route of Houston, now the fifth most populous of U.S. cities, and part to the fact the train now operated daily through the year. Formerly the Inter-American ran daily only during peak summer months and three times weekly the rest of the year.

The Inter-American operates with sleeper and Amdinette meal and beverage service between Chicago and Houston. Complimentary coffee and tea are served sleeping car patrons between 6:30 and 9:30 a.m. There is also sandwich, snack and beverage service on the Temple-Laredo leg.

At Laredo, travellers may cross the border by taxi to continue trips by rail via the National Railways of Mexico. The daily Aztec Eagle links Nuevo Laredo with Mexico City via Monterey, Saltillo, Venegas, San Luis Potosi, San Miguel Allende and Queretaro. The connection requires an overnight stay at Laredo or Nuevo Laredo, which many travellers find agreeable.

Amtrak travel agents offer a package tour of the border cities including two nights at Laredo's La Quinta Inn, a welcome cocktail and sightseeing for $56.95 each, double occupancy. The operators of this tour, Southwest Funseekers of Arlington, Tex., also have packaged three-day, two-night Amtrak stopover tours in other Texas cities.

Meanwhile, Amtrak has adopted a new slogan: "America's Getting Into Training."

The slogan reflects corporate optimism and determination after a year of decision which President Alan S. Boyd summarized by saying: "1979 may have been the most significant year for rail passenger service in this century."

A year-long debate finally culminated with President Jimmy Carter signing the Amtrak Reorganization Act which trimmed back some of Amtrak's less productive and/or duplicative routes, but at the same time added others.

Most important, Congress gave Amtrak its strongest financial commitment—more than $700 million in capital funding over the next three years for purchases of new equipment and to improve facilities.

Boyd recently said in an interview: "Our goal is to make Amtrak the No. 1 transportation company in America."

New intermodal agreements which bring both Greyhound and Trailways buses right to Amtrak stations have begun at Cincinnati and in the Pacific Northwest.

The new Greyhound service at Cincinnati picks up passengers arriving on Amtrak's Cardinal from Washington, D.C., via Charleston, W. Va., and on The Shenandoah from Washington, D.C., via Cumberland, Md., Clarksburg and Parkerburg, W. Va. The bus then continues to Louisville, Fort Knox and Bowling Green, Ky.; Nashville, Tenn., and Birmingham, Ala.

An agreement with Cascade Trailways provides connections at both the Seattle and Tacoma Amtrak stations to and from the Seattle-Tacoma Airport, McChord Air Force Base, Fort Lewis and such other Puget Sound area destinations as Auburn, Puyallup and Bremerton.

Connecting Amtrak trains include the Seattle-Los Angeles Coast Starlight, the Seattle-Chicago Empire Builder, Seattle-Vancouver, B.C., Pacific International and the Seattle-Salt Lake City Pioneer.

A family or other group of four can split costs on an Amtrak 1980 "Rail, Road and City Adventure" and enjoy three days' unlimited mileage use of a Hertz car, plus a night at a Holiday Inn, for as little as $28 each.

The new combination package is available at 61 locations through the country served by the three national travel organizations. Amtrak travel agents and reservation agents can book the rail trip, plus car and inn with one transaction. Extra hotel nights with four sharing a room can be booked for as little as $8 each.

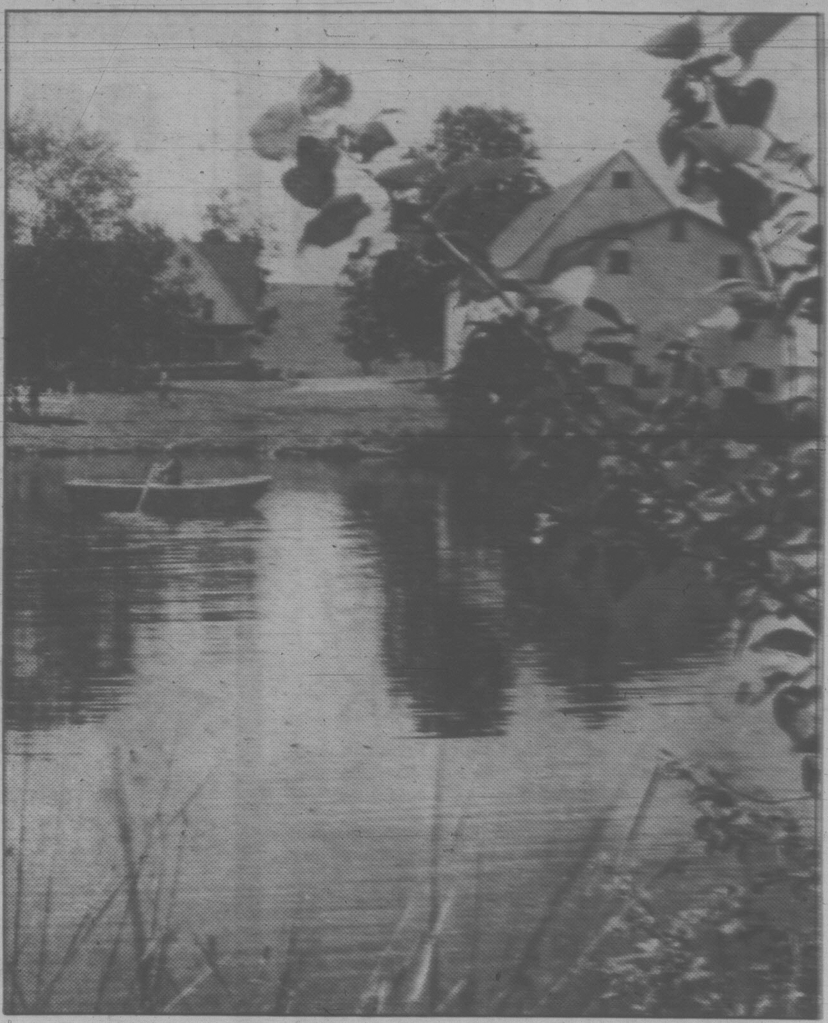
Cosy Prince Edward Island . . . . . . offers something special

Farm friends are firm friends

By John Prince



Cheap farm vacations offered all over P.E.I. are treat for city folk

Getting up with the birds to milk the cows is just routine to Prince Edward Island dairy farmer Dan MacPherson.

But to those who spend their Island vacation on the McPherson farm, it's the start of another exciting day.

Dan and Ruth MacPherson are among the Island's most successful and popular tourist hosts, the farm vacation families.

"We can't get away as often as we'd like for holidays," Ruth laughs, "so we have the vacationers come to us. We've had visitors from all over Canada, the United States and even Japan."

The MacPhersons first became involved with Farm Vacations in 1975, as a "trial effort" and soon found they were having fun. Their large farm house sits about a quarter of a mile from the main highway at Oyster Bed Bridge near the Island's famous white sand beaches.

Since P.E.I. is Canada's smallest province, nothing is very far away from anything else. The capital and only city Charlottetown, is 23 km (14 miles) from the MacPherson farm.

"That's close enough to have dinner and be in town for a play at the Charlottetown Festival," Dan points out. "We're close enough to the Green Gables golf course that some of our visitors play nine or 18 holes in the evening."

Eating is an important part of a farm vacation.

Guests at the MacPherson start the day with a huge breakfast. No need to rise with the sun to milk the cows; breakfast is served when the guests get up.

Some guests are content to let Ruth do the shopping for steaks, fresh seafood, farm-grown vegetables and Island fruit to keep the table groaning under the weight of home cooking.

Other guests prefer a hand in making dinner.

"So we give them a bucket and spade to dig clams down on the river beach back of the house," Ruth explains, "then we steam the clams, dip them in melted buter and have a great feed. Some people go deep sea fishing or try for some sea trout or salmon in the river. In berry season somebody usually picks a quart or so to put on cereal or to have with some fresh cream."

As if a big dinner was not enough, Ruth serves a "bedtime snack" of tea, coffee and some fresh baked cookies or bread and jam around 9:30p.m. Everyone gathers around and helps themselves.

"It's a good time for all to get together and perhaps talk about what they're going to do tomorrow. We try to help them with directions or suggestions as much as we can."

Those hearty meals fuel visitors for the many activities on Prince Edward Island. The nearby National Park offers extensive white sand beaches, an 18-hole championship golf course and many attractions to keep guests busy. Many visitors make a pilgrimage to the Anne of Green Gables house in the park.

"Most of the adults have read the Anne books," Ruth says, "and after visiting the house the youngsters end up reading them too."

Others book seats at the Charlottetown Festival where the musical stage version of Anne of Green Gables plays along with other productions throughout July and August.

Touring by car on Prince Edward Island is easy and convenient with the self-guiding day trips that cover small areas of the province. Most day trips are circular and cover from 80 to 100 km (50-60 miles), providing a close and intimate look.

"Sometimes we pack up ourselves and our guests and go to the lobster supper in New Glasgow," Dan says with obvious delight. The community-style dinner in the village hall features home-cooked food, fresh boiled lobster and home-made desserts, with free seconds of everything except lobster. For those who don't like lobster, a great roast beef dinner is available.

"We really like to have children among the guests," Ruth says.

"We have the usual assortment of farm cats and dogs and lots of room for kids to run."

Children are allowed to play as loudly as they like in the fields without disturbing anyone.

"This is probably a great vacation for the parents too," Dan adds, "especially if they live in an apartment in the city the rest of the year."

Sometimes the MacPhersons' grandchildren come over for a visit and join in with the visitors. The grandchildren, of course, know all the "secret places" where the best clams can be dug and how to climb the trees that run along the fence line between the fields.

"One of the best parts of being in the farm vacation program is the friends we make," Ruth smiles, turning the snapshots taken of past visitors.

"We exchange cards at Christmas and they write when they have new babies or something special happens."

Many visitors return year after year, making reservations for the following year before their vacation is over. Because the guests and hosts usually become such good friends, tourism officials suggest that visitors pay in advance. It is often difficult to do business with good friends.

The rate at Island farm vacation homes averages about $10 to $15 a room for two people and about $2 per person for a full breakfast and $5 per person for a full dinner. For vacationers who want to prepare their own meals some farm vacation homes offer guest kitchens complete with refrigerators, pots and pans, china and cutlery.

Farm vacation homes are found in all parts of the Island.

For listings and rates, write Tourism Services, P.O. Box 940, Charlottetown, Prince Edward Island. C1A 7M5.

Take comfortable clothing that can stand a bit of rough wear, rubber boots, camera, a hearty appetite and a sense of humor. Then get set for a great holiday.

Yes, in Macao they fix everything

AROUND the WORLD with STAN DELAPLANE

MACAO — "See Mr. Yim in the Sintra Hotel," said the Macao Tourist Board man in Hong Kong. "He knows you are coming and will take care of everything."

At the Sintra Hotel, after a frustrating jet foil crossing: "Mr. Yim is out of town." I said: "I'm supposed to go into China." The female desk clerk said: "Do you have three passport pictures?"

I said: "Nobody told me anything about passport photos."

She said: "Down the street is a photo shop. When do you want to go into China?"

"Tomorrow," I said. "It was all arranged. By your people in Hong Kong."

She said: "It takes 48 hours for China Travel Service to process your papers."

I said: "When is the next jet foil back to Hong Kong?"

You can make short trips into the People's Republic of China. But it's not like walking down to the corner and buying a bus ticket.

The one-day trip by sightseeing bus from Macao, the ancient Portuguese colony, has just been opened.

The jet foil terminal is at the Hong Kong waterfront. The girl at the window found my pre-paid tickets in a file. but—"These are for the 2:30 foil. You can't pick them up until 1:30."

Back to the Mandarin Hotel by taxi and drank coffee. Back at the jet foil, long line of people at the window buying tickets ahead of me. Stood in line until my turn. Girl now fished out pre-paid tickets and surrendered them to me.

From the entrance, it's a block long walk through a crowded jostling waiting room. Along a wooden pier dodging pieces of cargo. Up a gangway.

Porters? There are no porters. Nobody tells you that in advance. We brought all our baggage: Two suitcases. Small under-seat bag. Typewriter. Woman's handbag. (What do women put in these things? Bricks?)

Wrestled through throngs of Chinese fighting to get aboard. Found jet foil has absolutely no place to put baggage. Stacked it by the door. Found girl at counter selling candy.

Weak and exhausted, asked for gin and ice.

"Sorry, jet foil no serve liquor. You like orange soda water?"

Macao is a gambling town. Three casinos. Hong Kong Chinese jet foil over (one hour) by the hundreds to buck the tiger at baccarat and blackjack.

They do not bring baggage. A small overnight case was the biggest piece I saw. Most people carried nothing. (The smart way to visit Macao is to wear your pyjamas under your clothes. Carry a toothbrush in your pocket.)

The Sintra Hotel has no casinos — they bus you to one on a ship at the waterfront. The dining room bar was gloomy and we were the only customers at 7 p.m.

Two blocks away is the brightly lit Lisboa Hotel. It has a huge gambling room. Therefore it supports four restaurants: Chinese, Japanese, a steak house broiler, quite elegant, and a very good coffee shop.

Prices seemed moderate enough.

Before leaving the Sintra we were warned: "Don't walk around at night. Take taxis. Even the two blocks to the Lisboa." Welcome stranger!

Back at the Sintra: "We have arranged for you to take the bus tour into China tomorrow. Be outside the hotel at 7 o'clock." The passport pictures? "Will not be necessary." The 48-hour wait? "We have made special arrangements."

(Never explained. In gambling towns there is always some kind of fix going on. I think that's what happened. Though I wasn't to pay anything extra.)

"Exactly the same thing happened to me." I was having lunch with a friend whose business takes him often to the Far East.

He said: "I took all my luggage to the jet foil terminal. Nobody told ME there were no porters. At either end. Besides I had my wife and our child, one year old. We carried her, too.

"Same deal in Macao. 'You need three passport photos.' And, 'You must wait 48 hours.' I said: 'Just get me on the next jet foil back to Hong Kong.'

"I was burning. I'd had the same routine: 'Everything is arranged.'

"Just like you, by that night they'd fixed it."

Why the Hyatt Regency Vancouver and the Bayshore Inn have cut winter rates by one-third.
December through March are pleasantly mild winter months in Vancouver. They are also our "slow" months. So, to encourage your visit, we're offering a splendid inducement: one-third off our usual room rates.
With all due respect to the Bayshore, we believe the Hyatt Regency offers even more of an inducement than our friends up the road.
Because their special winter rate gets you a luxurious room with a beautiful view at a fine hotel out near tranquil Stanley Park. But our special winter rate gets you a luxurious room with a beautiful view at a fine hotel right in the heart of exciting downtown Vancouver. So you're steps—not taxi rides — from the city's best shopping, nightlife, restaurants, galleries, theatres and business addresses. And, because our room rates are priced a little lower than the Bayshore's year-round, one-third off ours is less expensive than one-third off theirs. Come discover Vancouver in winter. The only thing "off-season" about us is the price!

Payout by UIC down

OTTAWA (CP) — Unemployment insurance benefits declined to $248 million in November, down four per cent from the previous month and down 26 per cent from a year ago, Statistics Canada said Friday.

Part of the decline is attributed to a reduction in benefits to 60 per cent from 66.6 per cent of average weekly insurable earnings effective January, 1979. In addition, the number of weeks of insurance benefits dropped 26 per cent from November, 1978.

In the January-November period, payments fell 11 per cent to $3,7 billion compared with the first 11 months of 1978 and the number of weeks of benefits dropped 10 per cent.

By contrast, claims for jobless insurance benefits rose 33 per cent between October and November, higher than the average October-November change for the last three years.

Cowboys using radios in war against rustlers

RED DEER (CP) — Cowboys on horseback and in CB radio-equipped trucks are waging war against cattle rustlers in central Alberta.

Saying police investigations are inadequate and courts are too lenient, they have banded together to make livestock thieves bite the bullet.

"I'm all for hanging them if I can catch them," said rancher Tex Pashko, 50, of Sundre. "This is really a bad area."

Pashko said he lost 59 head of cattle since 1964 while a neighbor down the road had 50 calves stolen in a 10-day period.

He said he wants to help local ranchers establish a two-man night patrol on roads in the foothills.

Several cattle associations are already planning a campaign with local RCMP that will include range patrols. They also want to encourage ranchers to watch for strange vehicles on grazing land.

But catching the rustlers is only part of the problem because the courts let them off, Pashko said.

Ranchers were angry over a case in which a woman and her two sons were charged with stealing calves was thrown out of court for lack of evidence.

Eugene Waldorf, a farmer in nearby Daysland, said two rustlers who stole 13 of his yearling steers worth more than $5,000 each were fined only $400 each two years ago.

Under the Criminal Code, the penalty on conviction of cattle rustling can range from a $200 fine to 10 years in prison.

Burbewe Bystrom of Caroline said calves from his 500-head Hereford herd have been left lying on the road with their throats slashed by rustlers scared away by approaching vehicles.

When thieves are successful, it is difficult to determine if the animals are lost, dead or stolen, he said.

A suicide attempt at age 20 ended Conrad's unhappy sojourn in France.

New Conrad tome 'biographical feast'

By ALEK DE MARCH

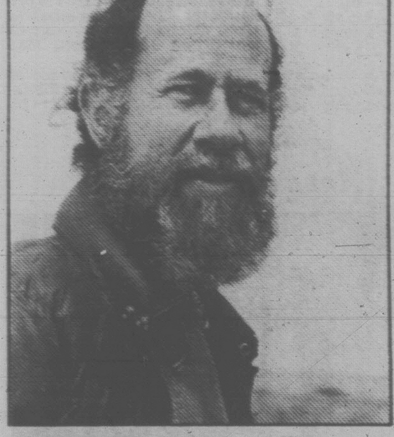
JOSEPH CONRAD: The Three Lives, by Frederick R. Karl. Farrar, Straus and Girous. $32.50.

Scholars and admirers of Joseph Conrad's work, especially those hungry for more details on how a Pole became a distinguished English novelist, are treated to a biographical feast with Frederick R. Karl's massive volume, Joseph Conrad: The Three Lives.

The Three Lives is a fascinating work which carries on its 1,008 pages the results of the author's lifetime study on Conrad. To establish how and why Conrad, the son of Polish political revolutionaries, became one of the leading novelists in the English language, Karl tells us more and in greater detail about Conrad the Pole, the sailor and the writer than any previous biographers, including the celebrated G. Jean-Aubrey.

Interest in Conrad's life and his work has recently been experiencing a revival. Last year Doubleday published Congo Diary, a small but interesting collection of Conrad's 22 pieces, many of them previously uncollected and some unpublished, edited by Zdzislaw Najder.

Until now there had been only three biographies, the most recent one published nearly two decades ago. Conrad made it difficult for biographers to do justice to his unusually varied and colorful life by carefully covering up his tracks, destroying letters written to him, telling contradictory anecdotes, and reshaping his past in published memoirs.



FREDERICK KARL . . . tells us more than any previous biographer

Karl, a novelist as well as a scholar, integrates Conrad with the Polish, French and British historical backgrounds, and social and political contexts. He also deals with Conrad's colleagues and friends and the influence they had on Conrad's cultural and literary outlook — among them Henry James, Stephen Crane, H. G. Wells and Ford Madox Ford.

Explaining the title of his book, Karl points out that "two lives have always been clear, as seaman and as writer. I have added to those a third, his life as a Pole."

By not skipping over Conrad's first 16 years in Poland, Karl properly assumes that Conrad "carried away from his early experience sufficient freight to make those years into separate existence."

For the same reason the author also concentrates on the French Interlude (1874-1878), focusing on Conrad's suicide attempt in Marseilles early in 1878, two months before he decided to ship out on an English vessel bound for Lowestoft, a small port on the east coast of England.

After his parents' death, Conrad, as the son of a Polish patriot, had been expected to take up the role of the landowning gentry and provide opposition to the Russians, who were then occupying eastern parts of Poland.

But at the age of 16 Conrad left Poland for France and a sea career. "In France Conrad was expected to sow his wild oats, in this traditional refuge of Polish emigres, and then, through some of the social connections provided for him, settle into a business or profession.

"However", says Karl, "despite the attractions of culture and language, Conrad never found his bearings in France. Instead, he sought bizarre adventures and, having gone through his patrimony accumulated debts, he attempted suicide by firing a shot into his chest." The bullet went through Conrad's body without touching any vital parts, and he suffered external wounds only.

Karl says Conrad's suicide attempt (at the age of 20), coinciding with his desire to leave French ships and join the British merchant service, was attached to several levels of decision. One of them was Conrad's desire to leave Poland, and later, while trying to control the direction of his life, to escape the influence of his uncle and guardian, Tadeusz Bobrowski.

The direction Conrad wanted to go disturbed Bobrowski, for many years responsible for young Conrad's financial affairs. While living in France, Conrad was receiving an allowance of 2,000 francs (about $450-$500). Still in his twenties, Conrad particularly resented his uncle's sober, ironic and often sardonic outlook on life.

"And yet," says Karl, "in another respect Bobrowski was a splendid influence on a boy and a young man who would become a writer. Twenty years before he wrote the first words of Almayer's Folly, Conrad was close to a man familiar not only with all the great Polish authors, but with an international array of writers, from Pushkin and Lermotov among Russians, to Byron and Poe, and Schiller among the Germans."

Through his father, Conrad had also become familiar with Shakespeare, Heine, Dickens, Hugo and de Vigny. And so, says Karl, a broad, humanistic pattern begun long before Conrad would turn actively to literature.

"That he wrote in English is the cause of astonishment; that he wrote at all no cause for amazement."

Dealing with Conrad's early years, Karl singles out several periods about which very little had been known until now. Years of research were needed to fill the many gaps and gather more material on such areas as the effects of Conrad's shifts from one guardian to another (there were several of them); the influence of excursions with his private tutor, including a summer tour of Switzerland and Italy; Conrad's frequent outbreaks of not properly defined illness; irregular attendance and poor performance at school, and, later, his adventures as a young man.

"The events of Conrad's early years, up to the time of his English sea career at twenty, are far more novelistic and impressionistic than they are the facts of a conventional biography," says Karl. "As a youth Conrad was already living out what would become the analogous events of his characters' lives; and the biographer is left with ambiguous motivations and unclear events."

Anecdotes

The book is packed with interesting anecdotes, many of them in Conrad's own words, illustrating his views on a wide range of subjects. For example:

● On politics: Socialism must inevitably end in Caesarism. The whole herd of idiotic humanity are moving at the bidding of unscrupulous rascals and a few sincere, but dangerous, lunatics. These things must be . . . disestablishment, land reform, universal brotherhood are but like milestones on the road to ruin.

● On death: There's nothing I dread more than an impotent old age, and I hope the experience will be spared to me. (Conrad died at the age of 64, in 1924. He made the above comment, sensing an early death, when he was 62.)

Karl concludes that in many ways Conrad is our representative modern man and artist. "An exile, a drifter, a marginal man until into his thirties, he exemplifies many aspects of the modern sensibility."

The Three Lives is a monumental biography in which Karl gives us an outstanding portrait of not only a rare and distinguished writer, but a remarkable man.

Shostakovich's self-portrait

By DOUG BEARDSLEY

TESTIMONY: THE MEMOIRS OF DIMITRI SHOSTAKOVICH, as related to and edited by Solomon Volkov, translated by Antonia Bouis. Harper & Row. $19.50.

"In the Soviet Union the rarest and most valuable thing is memory . . . a man without memory is a corpse."

Testimony, the memoirs of one of the great Russian composers of our century, offers us a self-portrait of Dimitri Shostakovich, a profoundly tormented man, deeply ambivalent in his personal feeling and in his role as Russian musical titan to the West.

The "testimony" of the title is the "testimony of an eye-witness" record of "the bitter experience of Shostakovich's grey and miserable life."

Born in 1906, Shostakovich's first memories were of the political events he witnessed in 1917 as a boy of 12. From that ominous beginning, Shostokovich reconstructs such important periods of modern Russian history as the Stalin-led Great Terror of the 1930s, the pogroms, the great purges, the shameless revision of Russian history, and the officially sanctioned plagiarism so widely practised in his time. The memoirs are also an account of one artist's intense psychological suffering and torture, and of his bitterness and disillusionment at the impossible dilemma placed before him.

In Testimony, Shostakovich also remembers his friends and sees "mountains of corpses." His relationships with such figures as his teacher Glazunov, the Russian satirist and playwright Zoshchenko, Stravinsky ("the only composer of our century whom I would call great"), the poet Anna Akhmatova, Meyerhold, Mayakovsky, Gogol and many others, are all recalled and shared in a human and honest way.

The Soviet system sees the function of art as reflecting the achievement of its people in both material and moral spheres, and, by doing so, inspiring them to greater heights. Any individual artistic style or work or art that draws attention to itself or presents an audience with difficulty is therefore open to the charge of "formalism," immediately frowned upon, and the artist frequently done away with.

It would be easy to see Shostakovich as a hostage in his own country, a condemned man, but it would not be an accurate reading. He worked under the most adverse psychological conditions and hardship, yet he was a Russian and a Communist to the end of his life, seeing himself both as a Soviet citizen and as a composer. Winner of six Stalin Prizes, Shostakovich was often regarded by Soviet authorities with great suspicion and bitterly denounced in the Soviet press as an enemy of the people.

Shostokovich was living proof of the Russian proverb that "a nightingale doesn't cease to be a nightingale just because it is put in a cage," yet his entire life was a war against the subjugation of the individual temperament. His major compositions are torn by his attempted reconciliation of his own musical instincts with the declared requirements of the role of music in Soviet society.

Celebrated Soviet composer at work on a score

Even his best works such as the late quartets and the Tenth Symphony seem to be continually interrupted. We can almost hear the massive struggle between the imaginative being of the artist and the desires of the totalitarian regime (which Shostakovich supported) for a "socialist-realist art," a demand no less binding today.

How to assert his artistic originality within these bounds was Shostakovich's life-long predicament. Nowhere is this struggle more apparent than in his Tenth Symphony. Revered by many in the West as "an affirmation of belief in world peace," this work is here revealed to be a portrait of Stalin and the Stalinist years of terror.

As Volkov points out, the political resonances of many of Shostakovich's works interferes with an objective evaluation of their musical merits. Ignoring the political and social implications of his work, Shostakovich can be seen as a minor composer, his First Symphony an adolescent work in every sense, his vastly overrated Fifth Symphony mere watered-down Mahler. Odds and ends of each of his best works satisfy and frequently excite the ear, but most of his compositions seem muddles, their movements musically unrelated, the tensions unresolved.

And what, finally, are we to make of this book? These memoirs are important, but they're also boring. Page after page of private meanderings and backbiting do little to enhance Solomon Volkov's reputation as an editor.

Nevertheless, there is no doubt that Shostakovich was a courageous and articulate man. His life story is moving, often harrowing, and he writes with sardonic wit. He was a true yurodivy, having the gift to see and hear what others know nothing about, but telling the world about his insights in an intentionally paradoxical way, in code.

Testimony contains a few dozen illustrations, a long preface and an introduction by Volkov, the young Soviet musicologist, and a valuable chronological listing of Dimitri Shostakovich's major compositions, titles, and awards.

It'll still be super in paperback

By PAUL BENNETT

The Second World War is a proven gold-mine for British authors intent on thrilling espionage novels — one with a few nuggets left, if Douglas Scott's second novel, The Gifts of Artemis, is any kind of guide.

Scott, whose first book The Spoils of War was widely acclaimed, had the advantage of having fought in Greece in 1944, landing with a British convoy on the heels of the retreating Germans.

He has combined his personal knowledge of the building-by-building street fighting with a Greek legend and an improbable Nazi invention to create an unusual and informative novel.

All too many books involving Nazis produce stereotyped officers, but Scott's Abwehr agent Manfried Keller is a strangely dichromatic type who treats Germany's enemies as friends, initially using the Greek Communists to destroy the divided resistance.

Later, although he knows the Nazis are going to lose, he still ensures that the "gifts of Artemis" are delivered to the Greek Communist leader George Kirkos, who, following the legend to its end, ultimately uses the secret weapon with devastating effects on his own kin.

The weapon, incidentally, is closely related to the type used by the Irish Republican Army to despatch none other than Earl Mountbatten of Burma a few months ago.

Kirkos, Keller, Kirkos' wife Christina, British Army agent Capt. James Mackenzie and a token American, Leo Preston, are all dramatically believable figures and the story line gives the reader an historic insight into the shifting sands of Greek politics, the same in the late war years as they are now.

While Gifts of Artemis is a super story, the thrifty reader would be advised to seek out the paperback version.

THE GIFTS OF ARTEMIS, by Douglas Scott. Collins. $13.95.

Wild, romantic stories of 19th-century India

Words spill from her typewriter

By JAMES YENCKEL

M. M. Kaye is a storyteller.

The words spill from her mouth in a torrent, and it is sometimes hard to keep up with her fast-paced conversation. But what would you expect from a woman who has put an awesome number of words between covers in her two current best-selling novels of India, The Far Pavilions and Shadow of the Moon.

At 955 pages, Pavilions, is the kind of book about which a reader says, "It took me July and August, but I had to finish it." Shadow is not quite as hefty at 614 pages.

Their appeal is in Kaye's richly detailed portrayal of the wild and romantic India of the 19th century where spoiled and wilful concubines assassinated their bejewelled way to powerful places in tiny — but rich — mountain kingdoms, where half-caste heroes and heroines are tossed with the destinies of clashing civilizations. There are midnight escapes, love-making in raging sandstorms . . . all on the backdrop of the Raj.

Kaye is jolly; small, slender, greying and "on the wrong side of 60."

She was born in India, the daughter of a British intelligence official playing the "great game" of trying to keep Afghanistan out of Russian hands.

The British made a "dreadful boggle" in Afghanistan, she says, and "I'm happy to see the Russians are now making the same boggle."

Her family — and that of her husband, a retired British army officer — had long been in British India and participated in incidents she describes in her books.

As a child, Kaye recalls, her family went to Simla in the hills to escape Delhi's summer heat.

Her parents took a cottage by the forest with a view of the Himalayas. Below the house was a sign post pointing up a narrow cart road. It read simply, "To Tibet." She says she and her sister used to race down to the trail to watch the colorful trader carts from Tibet pass by on their way to the Simla market.

Years later, she went back and found almost everything unchanged, except the cart trail. Before it had smelled of mule urine, but since China had sealed the border, "it was dry and empty and boring."

Like many other British children growing up in a household with Indian servants, she learned to speak the local language. "We spoke the vernacular far better than English." Her ayah, or nurse, would take her to listen to storytellers in the market.

"It was like a movie serial" where they keep you coming back for another episode. The storyteller "would get you frightfully excited and then pass the hat around. If he collected enough, the story went on."

All along, Kaye was gathering the knowledge of India and its people the fills her two books. Much of Pavilions is set in 1879 when Britain failed in a bloody attempt to take Afghanistan. Shadow takes place a few years earlier in 1857 when Indian troops turned on their British officers and families.

Kaye says she was always asking questions. In that way, she learned about the Afghan war and the mutiny from people who knew about it first-hand.

In both her India novels, a principal character is sent to England for formal education. That's what happened to Kaye at 10. And like Ashton in Pavilion and Winter in Shadow she always intended to return.

She did so at 17 and remained until her father's death, when she and her mother went back to England. There Kaye set herself up in a studio to paint and illustrate children's books, eventually writing a series of them herself.

Her byline then was Mollie K[illegible]abbits and the mice." But when she decided to switch to spy thrillers, she became M. M. Kaye (for Mary Margaret).

She lived in India during the Second World War "doing volunteer work" while her husband often was away in Burma. They left India in 1947.

Sad at having to leave India, the family returned for a time to England, where Kaye began writing again.

Her spy novels caught on, but she wanted to write a book about India. Finally she got one thriller ahead and took two years off to do Shadow.

Shadow has had an unusual publishing history. Following the success of Pavilions, a hardback best-seller last year and now high on the paperback list, Shadow was reissued, and it, too, is on its way up the list.

But when Shadow first was published 23 years ago, it contained only a third of its present 614 pages, says Kaye. The rest had been edited out. It did not sell well.

They kept in the romantic stuff, she says, but took out the history.

When the book came out, "colonialism was an absolutely unprintable word."

That notwithstanding, Kaye refers often to the "magical qualities" of her life in India and her eagerness to capture it.

As she said a year ago in an interview about The Far Pavilions, ". . . for my children, grandchildren, great-grandchildren, I want to write how it was. It was an enchanting life which will never never come again. If anything has gone with the wind, that has. It was a magical life to have lived."

KAYE: "It was a magical life to have lived."

French translation slows sewer hearing

A judicial review of a cabinet order allowing a sewer outfall off Esquimalt Lagoon was adjourned Friday to allow for translation of a Quebec case entered as evidence.

The B.C. Supreme Court chambers hearing arises from a petition by residents of Albert Head-Colwood area who are challenging the cabinet's action in upsetting a 1978 Pollution Control Board ruling.

It is being heard before Mr. Justice J.C. Bouck, who adjourned the matter to Feb. 13.

Part of a submission by Bob Edwards, counsel for the attorney-general of B.C., is supported by a Quebec case.

Edwards read part of the transcript after handing a copy up to the bench.

The judge, following the text as Edwards spoke, admitted his French is imperfect and accepted Edwards' offer of a translation, which also was accepted by counsel for the petitioners, Bob Price.

Edwards argued an administrative tribunal like the PCB is competent to decide matters of law and the authority exercised by cabinet was within its powers of reviewing a tribunal decision.

Price had said the cabinet committee which heard an appeal by the Capital Regional District was not equipped, by the chairman's own admission, to deal in a judicial manner with the CRD application.

The transcript showed the chairman as saying, however, an attempt would be made to follow the rules of natural justice.

Price said the committee was equipped with neither the technical expertise nor the administrative function in matters of pollution control.

A determination of the PCB on matters of fact should be final, Price said.

The petition claims the cabinet heard and accepted new evidence instead of relying on evidence presented to the PCB hearing as required by law.

The cabinet found no error in fact or law, it is alleged, and therefore it exercised discretion wrongfully, and itself erred in law, acting without or beyond its jurisdiction.

It is also alleged the pollution control legislation is unconstitutional in the context of powers accorded to the courts by the British North America Act.

The petitioners ask either that the section of the Pollution Control Act dealing with the cabinet's judicial power be declared ultra vires or that the cabinet's decision be quashed and the executive council be directed to reconsider and deliver in favor of the petitioners.

The matter arose in July, 1977, when the director of the PCB issued a permit to the regional district allowing effluent discharge into the sea on condition that secondary treatment be provided by the end of 1981.

The Colwood Ratepayers Association, the Albert Head Ratepayers Association and the Concerned Citizens of B.C. appealed to the PCB in November, 1977, and the appeal was allowed — discharge of effluent would not be permitted.

The CRD then appealed to the cabinet which heard the matter a year later and allowed the appeal on condition that no more than 70 lots would be served.

Malcolm Macaulay, counsel for the regional district, said even if the allegations in the petition are correct they do not lead to the conclusion that the cabinet acted without or in excess of its jurisdiction.

There is nothing wrong, he said, in the cabinet acting within its discretion to accept unsworn evidence as an administrative tribunal, or to accept new evidence even though hearsay.

At Saint Michael and All Angels' Anglican Church, on December 8, 1979, Constance Ruth, daughter of George and Frances Davidson, formerly of Ottawa, Ont., was united in holy matrimony by Canon William Hill, to James Edward, son of Earl and Peggy Sutherland, Victoria, B.C.

The bride was escorted up the aisle on the arm of her father, and was radiant in her long gown of heavy ivory slipper satin, embroidered with pearls and seed pearls, and had been worn by her mother on her wedding day. Her veil of tulle illusion was edged with alencon lace and fell from a coronet of seed pearls, which also had been worn by her mother. She carried a bouquet of cerise roses and stephanotis, entwined in an heirloom holder of silver filigree, which her maternal great-grandmother had carried on her wedding day.

Ruth chose her two sisters as attendants, Mrs. Nancy Haynes, and Miss Jane Davidson, wearing identical gowns of cyclamen pink lace with long pleated skirts of silk jersey. They carried nosegays of roses, cyclamen and baby's breath. Jim chose William Copley as his best man, and David Tasker and Kelvin Kruger ushered the guests into the lovely old church which was adorned with roses, chrysanthemums and white poinsettias.

Following a reception at the Oak Bay Beach Hotel, the newlyweds left for Hawaii. They now reside in Victoria, B.C.

TWA chops bosses' pay by 10-25%

NEW YORK (UPI) — Trans World Airlines has notified 800 executives earning $35,000 or more their pay will be cut 10 to 25 per cent at once to save $900,000.

The payroll saving will hardly make a dent in the $56.4 million loss TWA suffered in the fourth-quarter of 1979 but President Edward Meyer said at least it will make executives more conscious of the airline's problems.

In the announcement, TWA said executives earning $35,000 to $60,000 will be cut 10 per cent. For those earning between $60,000 and $100,000 the cut will be up to 15 per cent, and for those making between $100,000 and $150,000 it will be up to 20 per cent.

Those making $150,000 and over will get up to the top 25 per cent slash.

The cuts, however, will be figured on the various brackets instead of flatly on the total amount and thus will be somewhat less at the higher levels. Thus an executive making $100,000 would be taxed 10 per cent on the first $60,000 and 15 per cent on the remaining $40,000.

Meyer said the reduction on his $205,000 annual salary will amount to $32,500; a flat 25 per cent cut would have been $51,000.

Zambia buys 16 Soviet MIGs

By JOHN BORRELL
The Guardian

LUSAKA — Zambia has ordered a squadron of 16 MIG-21s from the Soviet Union in a secret armaments deal worth at least $100 million which appears to indicate that President Kenneth Kaunda remains concerned about the prospects for peace in southern Africa.

The MIG-21s, sophisticated combat aircraft which are a match for the Mirage used by the South Africa Air Force and superior to anything flown by the Rhodesians, are expected to be delivered during the first half of this year.

More than 200 Zambia Air Force personnel, including pilots and ground crew, have been training in the Soviet Union for the past two months and will man the MIGs on their return.

Commissioning of the new squadron will make Zambia's air force one of the most powerful in sub-equatorial Africa, bringing its combat strength to more than 50 aircraft, including 12 Chinese MIG-19s.

It is not known how much Zambia is paying for the MIGs but, in a recent Soviet arms deal with Finland, 30 MIG-21s were supplied at a price approaching $4 million per aircraft.

This would put the cost to Zambia at more than $60 million with an additional $40 million being spent on equipment for the Zambian army.

The Soviets, to whom President Kaunda turned as a last resort following rebuffs from the United States and China, have apparently imposed stiff terms on Zambia. Normally reliable sources suggest that as much as 20 per cent has had to be advance and the remainder over seven years at commercial rates of interest.

That Kaunda was prepared to commit himself to such a large arms bill at a time of severe economic problems is most easily explained by Zambia's determination to stop humiliating cross-the-border raids by the Rhodesian air force.

The final agreement is believed not to have been signed until after the Rhodesian settlement talks, which led to the present ceasefire paving the way for elections later this month, were started at Lancaster House in London.

This indicates to many observers here that Kaunda is either fearful of a crisis-ridden transition resulting in some kind of civil war or that he is looking beyond Rhodesia to the possibility of confrontation with Pretoria seems out of the question, the president may wish to make it more difficult for South African forces to cross from Namibia into Zambia in pursuit of SWAPO guerrillas.

The way the South Africans have operated almost at will in southwest Zambia for the past two years is a humiliation keenly felt by the average Zambian.

A third possibility is that the Zambian leader is anxious to head of rumblings of discontent in the armed forces by re-equipping both the army and the air force.

Whatever the reason, Kaunda seems certain to run into a minefield of domestic and foreign criticism.

Domestic critics will argue that given Zambia's balance of payments problems and mounting external debt such military expenditure is unjustified, particularly since previous defense spending seems to have done little to shore up Zambia's defences.

Foreign criticism is likely to centre on the source of the weaponry rather than its cost.

A popular Western argument is that Third World states receiving Soviet weaponry are automatically swept into the Soviet orbit, an argument likely to be pushed even more hysterically following Moscow's invasion of Afghanistan.

Despite the substantial arms deal there is no evidence that Kaunda is tilting towards Moscow.

In the past, Zambia has received arms from a variety of sources, including Britain and China, without supporting either politically out of a sense of obligation.

Western countries, particularly the United States and Britain, remain Zambia's largest aid donors and have just announced substantial new loans and grants designed to help Zambia prevent a famine later this year.

Small ceramics are great in this exhibition of Kogos

By AUDREY JOHNSON

The fascination of small, which for many people is far more alluring than big; the universal appeal of the ceramist's art: these are combined in Kogo, which is probably among the most charismatic exhibitions seen at the Art Gallery of Greater Victoria in a long time.

Kogo is the Japanese word for incense box and this is not to be confused with incense burner. The box is a decorative adjunct to the traditional tea ceremony; it holds just the quantity of incense chips that will be scattered on the warm coals in the brazier to provide the scented relaxed ambience essential to the tea ceremony.

Incredibly there are nearly 600 Kogo on view at the gallery. Beautifully lighted and displayed at an eye-level that would be comfortable for quite young visitors, they range from palm-size (5.3 x 7.0 cm) to tiny (2.4 x 6.0cm).

The story behind the exhibition is in itself fascinating. The 600 objects are only a fragment of a collection of 3,500 that was gathered by Georges Clemenceau, French Premier of the First World War period. Some time after his death the family decided to sell the collection and it was purchased in its entirety by a Quebec businessman, Joseph-Arthur Simard, who, inexplicably, left the treasures in their packing cases in a Montreal warehouse for 20 years.

In 1959 a heart attack alerted him to his possible demise and after offering the collection to the University of Montreal and being told that he would also have to provide a building for their housing, he left it instead to the Montreal Museum of Fine Arts.

There, in storage among unclassified material, in their cases marked incorrectly "Kojo", they remained undiscovered until late 1976 when Yutaka Mino, working for the museum, accidentally opened one of the cartons.

"The thought of it still fills me with emotion," Mino, now Curator of the Indianapolis Museum, says of his rediscovery of the collection.

The pieces represent kilns all over Japan and included are works from kilns now long forgotten. Kogo were made of many materials such as lacquer and metal but this entire collection is exclusively the product of the ceramic art.

Dr. Mino tells us that Kogo came to be appreciated apart from their role in the tea ceremony. "They were exchanged as gifts and treasured for their own sake." He mentions "their beauty and imaginativeness and their exuberant variety" — a description which is amply demonstrated in this showing.

No two boxes in the whole 600 are alike. Even though some forms occur with fair frequency — the fan, the chrysanthemum; turtles, ducks, rabbits, gods, pine cones; the viewpoint in each case is thoroughly individual.

Many convey an impression of being improvised on the spur of the moment. Almost always there is a lyrical sense of form; for instance the sensuous-slender curve of a wistaria pod, its surface decorated with a tracery of the vine. And the sensitivity of the numerous bird forms; some interestingly treated in abstract planes like wood carvings.

There is also an abundance of natural humor; some of it sheer creative happiness welling up as in the red raku badger and in sundry other animal shapes, especially the monkey representations.

There is also a superb range of techniques and much jewel-like color. From the cottage-industry look of raku to the polished aqueous elegance of Seiji, (celadon porcelain); from the enameled and gilded beauty of Satsuma to classic blue-and-white.

There are also some outrageously busy objects such as boat shapes where the artist seems to have been at pains to load aboard as many minute figures as possible.

Inevitably in such an enormous collection, everything will not be of equal aesthetic value but the total impression of Kogo is magical and memorable. It is an exhibition that demands lingering attention and in fact, return visits. It is certainly one not to be missed during its stay until March 16.

The exhibition has been organized by the Montreal Museum of Fine Arts and is accompanied by a handsome catalogue with color plates. An English translation supplement is also available.

DEPUTY MINISTER

Victoria, B.C.
File: 571-7921-27(1)

Quick action, alarm save 2

Two persons who were overcome by smoke in their apartment late Friday night owe their lives to a smoke alarm and quick action by two city policemen.

Evan Thomas, 18, and Helen Charleson, 45, are in good condition in Victoria General Hospital.

Thomas is recovering from smoke inhalation and Charleson from a severe gash to her head.

The two were rescued from Charleson's apartment at 2667 Blanshard by Constables Vic Bell and Harvey Stevenson.

The officers were called to the home by a neighbor who complained of a noisy party and an alarm going off.

A police spokesman said the officers found Thomas, a native of Ahousat, sprawled unconscious on a smoldering chesterfield in the living room.

They carried him outside and than returned and found the woman lying at the bottom of some basement stairs. She too was unconscious.

They carried her out and went back inside once more and brought out the smoldering chesterfield which burst into flames as they set it down on the front lawn.

Firemen arrived moments later and extinguished the blaze.

Damage was minimal.

Fire officials blamed the fire on careless smoking.

Barrett campaigns

NDP leader Dave Barrett joined federal party candidate Jim Manly in a rally Friday night at Juan de Fuca Arena attended by about 350 people.

Manly, who is running in the Cowichan-Malahat-The Islands riding, drew the night's loudest applause when he reiterated his party's pledge to make PetroCan a more effective competitor to the multinational oil companies.

Barrett took a shot at Conservative Finance Minister John Crosbie's budget and said if the government concentrated more on collecting the $15 billion in deferred corporate income taxes, the $11.7 billion federal deficit would be wiped out "with some change left over."

Gunmen seize siege survivor

GUATEMALA CITY (AP) — About 15 gunmen raided a Guatemala City hospital on Friday and carried off the survivor of three dozen peasant protesters who were caught in a fire that swept through the besieged Spanish Embassy a day earlier, hospital employees say.

It was not known whether the abductors were comrades of the badly burned man or members of Guatemala's right-wing death squads, which allegedly have carried out hundreds of killings and kidnappings of anti-government Guatemalans.

The embassy fire began on Thursday when one of the peasants who had occupied the embassy hurled a firebomb as police attacked. The occupation had begun two hours earlier to protest against what the peasants said was government repression of their people.

Guatemalan authorities said 39 people were found dead after the blaze in the two-storey building was put out — 32 protesters and seven people they held hostage — five of them embassy staff members.

The deaths led Spain to break diplomatic relations with the military government of this Central American nation.

Guatemalan authorities blamed all the deaths on the fire. But the Spanish ambassador, one of only two to survive, said gunfire began as the police smashed into the embassy offices.

Iran caper mixed blessing for troubled Clark

By MARY JANIGAN
FP News Service

ELECTION 80

OTTAWA — Joe Clark takes his struggling war on the Liberals into a flat-out, two-week road show tomorrow morning in a last-ditch bid to sell himself as a strong western leader.

On the surface, the new Tory theme is that the prime minister symbolizes security in energy, national defence and economic development. In reality, his handlers are simply praying that the Canadian caper in Iran and his hawkish pro-American stand on Afghanistan will dissipate continuing voter doubts about his leadership track record.

Those foreign events have showered a bizarre mixture of blessings and looming boomerang problems on the Conservative campaign. Clark has been skillfully exploited as a general and as a diplomat. He has bashed the Soviets, basked in a modest statesman's glow and battered Liberal leader Pierre Trudeau as a man with a questionable background in defending western values.

The strategy has electrified partisan crowds. The prime minister mutters about unreliable foreign powers, lauds the free world's way of life and then defends his tough economic and energy policies as part of a Tory push to shore up security across the land.

But as the critical last two campaign weeks arrive and the Tories still trail in the polls, the dangers of this posturing begin to mushroom.

There is, for example, no question that Clark has boosted party morale and his own leadership image through his tough attacks on Trudeau. Those insinuations — coupled with the Iranian hostage heist — have snared headlines for a week.

But as the campaign nears the crunch and the tales of diplomatic daring die, Clark can only continue to grab headlines by upping the assault. By last Thursday, he was already telling a fervently partisan Ottawa crowd that Trudeau advocates discretion in the face of Communist aggression. Next week, he could go too far and ffend the voters in his bid to reap repeated headlines in the defence of western values.

Tory ads castigating Trudeau have already had this result. Strategists report that a blitz of positive messages will totally replace the anti-Liberal commercials by next Monday or Tuesday night. That deadline to change the campaign ad thrust apparently comes earlier than expected after a wave of voter protests and the lesson is not lost on the Conservatives.

Moreover, there are still strong signs that the voters will not be distracted from their suspicion that Clark is not firm enough to deal with the oil-producing provinces and that the 18-cents-a-gallon excise tax on gasoline is simply a federal rip-off. Although Clark was lavishly praised for his foreign policy stand throughout last week's successful southern Ontario tour, he was also questioned and often berated about that tax. Clark constantly has to beat the war drums to sell his plea that higher prices mean secure energy supplies.

Tory national campaign director Paul Curley says that Clark's bone-jolting bus tour through 23 Ontario ridings thie week has already improved Tory standing in the province and that his policies on foreign affairs "reinforce the fact that Clark is the man to bring Canada into the 1980s — it reinforces his leadership capabilities."

That may be. But it forces Clark to sell his platform and his potential by playing on the fear of war and the need for a strong Western leader. And that could leave many voters turning to the reticent but more experienced Trudeau as the only man to pilot Canada through times of trouble.

Embassy affair gave boost to ailing Tories — Trudeau

TORONTO (CP) — Liberal Leader Pierre Trudeau says Prime Minister Clark's popularity might rise during the Feb. 18 election campaign as a result of the dramatic escape of six Americans from Iran through Canadian diplomatic efforts.

Trudeau said during a Global Television interview Friday, taped for broadcast Sunday, that the Clark government handled the embassy affair well but not perfectly because many persons seem to have known Americans were being hidden by Canadian Embassy personnel in Tehran.

Trudeau quoted a published report in which External Affairs Minister Flora MacDonald said word of the hiding had become the subject of cocktail talk in diplomatic circles before the Americans escaped from Iran.

Trudeau asked how word of the situation reached those circles.

"Through whom? Who had been talking? Certainly not our party," Trudeau, who was briefed by Clark about the affair in November, says he kept the secret even from senior Liberal officials.

International affairs has been Clark's weak point, the former prime minister said in Friday's interview, citing what has become a standard list of Conservative foreign policy blunders. These range from aborted plans to move the Canadian Embassy in Israel to Jerusalem from Tel Aviv and the loss of a Candu nuclear reactor sale to Argentina.

"I guess for that reason, it didn't seem like Clark would benefit from international affairs," the Liberal leader said. "But the contrary may be true now."

Asked if he would have handled the affair differently, Trudeau said it is always easy to second-guess someone. But he repeated that he had kept the secret while it became known to many persons in the Conservative party.

And because the government is boasting about the affair, "the Iranians might be miffed," he said.

Trudeau brushed aside suggestions he is soft on communism because he gives only qualified support to a boycott of the Summer Olympics in Moscow to protest the Soviet Union's intervention in Afghanistan.

"I understand that the Pope, who is not particularly soft on communism, has said the Games should go on," Trudeau said.

He added that because boxer Mohammad Ali was sent by U.S. President Jimmy Carter to Africa in search of support for the proposed boycott, it appears Carter supports his view it will be effective only if joined by a significant number of countries.

Trudeau also spoke freely of his decision to remain as Liberal leader and fight this election after having announced his intention to resign Nov. 21.

He said he had wanted to have some time for a more-private life "before I became too decrepid."

But when the Progressive Conservative government was defeated in the Commons and he agreed to lead the Liberals in this election, he told himself: "If you're going to accept, you're going to have to fight to win."

Trudeau said he is keeping a lower profile in this campaign because too much attention was focused last time on his image as a thumbs-in-belt "gunslinger" and on other facets of his aggressive style.

"I was quite frankly resolved in this campaign not to go through that experience" again, he said.

Instead, he is "trying to make people understand that this government must be defeated because it spells disaster for the Canadian economy."

That was the theme of a speech earlier in the day to a luncheon audience in Peterborough, Ont., a former Liberal riding won by the Tories last spring.

He said the budget was a breach of faith by the Conservatives, who had promised tax cuts, lower unemployment and inflation and a high rate of economic growth.

But Trudeau said the budget contained excessive energy price increases and forecast a one-per-cent growth rate, an inflation rate of 11 per cent and an 8.3-per-cent unemployment rate in 1980.

Foreign affairs Ed Broadbent's Waterloo?

By CAROL GOAR
FP News Service

TORONTO — Events took a cruel turn for Ed Broadbent this week.

The NDP leader looked like an unlucky student who'd spent weeks cramming for an important exam, only to discover that he'd studied all the wrong questions.

Broadbent struggled bravely to cope with a barrage of questions about nuclear war, international hostages, military spending and troop strength. But it was clear his heart wasn't in it.

All week, he kept trying unsuccessfully to steer the focus of his campaign back to the issues he understood — energy prices and interest rates. But people didn't want to listen.

Reporters had to wrench foreign policy statements out of a reluctant Broadbent. His pronouncements on international affairs came out sounding haphazard, inconsistent with traditional NDP doctrine and in some cases, simply uniformed.

To make matters worse, whenever he got around to discussing international affairs, both Prime Minister Joe Clark and Liberal Leader Pierre Trudeau had already staked out their positions and made headlines.

Never had it been so evident that Broadbent — despite his personal charm, his integrity and his carefully-laid-out economic policy — was just not in the same league as his opponents.

The most painful illustration of this second-string status came Monday when he blundered into a hasty and unfortunate analysis of the closing of Canada's embassy in Iran last weekend.

Broadbent found out about the incident in the worst possible way. A television reporter caught him off-guard during a stroll through a suburban town hall with the news that the government had abruptly closed the embassy. The journalist insisted on a comment then and there. Doing his best to hide his surprise, Broadbent said he might have something to say later in the day.

His aides made some quick calls to Ottawa and learned that the embassy had indeed been closed. They were told the action was designed to increase pressure on the Iranian authorities to secure the released of the hotages imprisoned in the U.S. Embassy for an agonizing two and a half months.

That seemed rather puzzling, but they took external affairs officials at their word and passed the information on to Broadbent. He also accepted it at face value and prepared to comment.

Just in time for the 11 o'clock news, Broadbent said he could see no valid reason for the closing of the embassy at the very time when tensions in Iran seemed to be cooling. (The country had just elected a new, and apparently moderate, president.)

There was only one obvious motive. Clark, trailing in the election polls, wanted to make himself look tough abroad so he could score political points with the hawkish Canadian electorate. Broadbent said exactly that so millions of television viewers across the country.

The next day he had to eat his words.

Early that morning, Clark phoned and explained that the embassy closing was not at all what it appeared to be. For two months — as Trudeau, Clark, several cabinet ministers, a number of diplomats and external affairs officials, several American government officials and even some journalists had been aware — Canada had been hiding six American diplomats in its embassy, planning and rehearsing their escape.

When the government suddenly closed the embassy and hustled out its occupants, Broadbent was the only major party leader who was in the dark. Clark apologized and left the NDP leader to find his way out of the mess.

It was a disastrous start to a bad week. Other problems followed:

— When Broadbent declared that his was not a party of pacificts, members of caucus piped up and reminded him that the NDP had always spoken out strongly in favor of disarmament.

— When he said the NDP believed Canada should stand firm in the face of Soviet aggression, adding that war is sometimes the only way to defend western values and freedom, reporters pointed out that the NDP had spent the last decade calling for the country's withdrawal from its two major military alliances, NATO and NORAD.

ELECTION 80

— When asked whether the NDP supports an increased defense budget, all Broadbent could offer was a full and urgent review of the question.

— He called for economic sanctions against the Soviet Union, but had to add that he never intended to have Canada cut off food exports.

— After announcing that he supported the initiatives taken by U.S. President Jimmy Carter to get Soviet troops out of Iran "100 per cent," Broadbent had to clarify his statement to say he meant that backing in principle only.

Some observers accused the press of being too hard on Broadbent. After all, they said, foreign policy has never been one of the party's strong areas. Surely it is unfair to expect a political leader to come up with instant foreign policy in hotel room sna diarplanes.

Others said Broadbent deserved the grilling. Any man who insists, as the NDP leader has repeatedly done, that he is running for the prime ministership and nothing less, must be prepared to cope with questions in every area of government, they said.

Broadbent reluctantly agreed with the second philosophy and told reporters he would comment on world crises as they came up.

But, if international affairs slipped from the forefront, he added with undisguised eagerness, he would be happy to go back to talking about his old friends: inflation, unemployment and oil prices.

Grits lose ground to Tories in Ontario

TORONTO (CP) — Two polls taken 12 days apart within the last two weeks in Toronto suggest that while the Liberals maintain a large lead over the Progressive Conservatives for the Feb. 18 election, their support is slipping, professional pollster Peter Regenstreif says in a copyright story in today's Star.

The first survey, a sample of 608 personal interviews between Jan. 16 and 19, gave the Liberals a 31-percentage-point lead over the Conservatives. The second, a sample of 512 others by telephone last Wednesday, showed their lead at 13 points. Both polls were conducted by the Gallup organization.

Fifty-two per cent of those questioned in the first poll said they would vote Liberal, 21 per cent Conservative, 17 per cent NDP and one per cent other parties. Five per cent were undecided and four per cent had no preference.

The second gives the Liberals 36 per cent, the Tories 23 per cent, the NDP 18, others less than one per cent. Fifteen per cent were undecided and seven per cent had no preference.

Some of the changes could reflect the fact that the second poll was done by telephone, Regenstreif said, which tends to increase the percentage of undecided voters compared to personal interviewing.

The Star said it commissioned the second survey because voters may have been influenced by events such as Prime Minister Clark's reaction to U.S. President Carter's proposed Olympic boycott and Canada's involvement in aiding the escape of six Americans from Tehran.

The second survey found that 92.6 per cent had heard of the escape. Twenty-four per cent said their opinion of Clark had gone up as a result of the action, seven per cent said it had gone down, 57.2 per cent said it was unchanged and 4.3 per cent did not know.

Asked if the Iranian incident "influenced the way you plan to vote or not," 6.6 per cent said yes, 79.7 per cent said no, 6.3 per cent did not know and 7.4 per cent were not aware of the incident.

At the same time as the first poll in Toronto, another sample of 631 personal interviews was taken in the 22 ridings from Oshawa, around Toronto, through Hamilton and the Niagara Peninsula.

That survey showed the Liberals ahead of the Conservatives 41 per cent to 31 per cent. The NDP had 21 per cent while other parties had less than one per cent. Three per cent were undecided and four per cent refused to state a preference.

The samples of 608 and 631 are said to be accurate to within four points either way, 19 times out of 20. The sample of 512 is accurate to within 4½ points, 19 times out of 20.

Scenario of an oil war

Secret study sees N-arms

New York Times

WASHINGTON — A secret U.S. Defence Department report on the military situation in the Persian Gulf region has concluded American forces could not stop a Soviet thrust into northern Iran and that the United States should thus consider using "tactical" nuclear weapons in any conflict there.

At the same time, the report also concludes that the United States could possibly handle Soviet threats to oil tankers in the area and might also be able to match any effort by Moscow to move forces into Saudi Arabia.

The Pentagon report, entitled Capabilities in the Persian Gulf, was described by officials as the most extensive military study of the region ever done by the government. Completed after the revolution in Iran but prior to the Soviet move into Afghanistan late last year, the report examines the capacity of the United States to respond to a number of potential contingencies, including a Soviet attack on Iran; an attempt by Moscow to bomb major oil facilities in the Persian Gulf and a Soviet submarine campaign against Western oil tankers in the Indian Ocean.

The 70-page report was commissioned by Secretary of Defence Harold Brown almost two years ago, after an inter-agency study concluded that the Persian Gulf was the most likely flash-point for a confrontation between Moscow and Washington. It was prepared by military officers as well as civilian analysts in the office of the secretary of defence and is said to have laid the groundwork for the administration's current effort to bolster local defences and the presence of American forces in the region.

(In Washington today, Pentagon spokesman Thomas Ross refused to comment on the Times' story or to say whether Brown had commissioned such a report as that described by The Times.

(However, Pentagon officials who said they were familiar with the the report but not its exact details described the study as one of a number of such staff reports and studies.)

After stating that Moscow's control of Persian Gulf oil would "destroy NATO and the American-Japanese alliance without recourse to war by the Soviets," the report lists the large forces available to the Soviet Union to the north of the region in the North Causasus, Transcausasus and Turkestan military districts: 23 mechanized divisions, consisting of about 200,000 troops; 70 tactical fighters, including 35 advanced Fencer fighter-

2 sailors seeking asylum

VANCOUVER (CP) — Two Russians seeking political asylum in Canada were hiding in an undisclosed downtown hotel Friday night while the ship they were supposed to board left port at Campbell River.

An immigration official said the Russian freighter Alexander Serfimovich, which was taking on pulp at a mill just north of the east Vancouver Island community, was headed for international waters. Its destination was not immediately known.

The pair, a man and a woman, flew to Vancouver from an undisclosed Russian point Friday and were to travel to Campbell River to relieve members of the Russian freighter's crew.

However, they decided not to show up and were being harbored by a city lawyer.

An immigration spokesman said the lawyer, whom he declined to identify, phoned him to say he was representing the pair seeking asylum. He demanded a meeting with immigration officials within 48 hours.

The defectors were identified only as a stewardess and a fourth mate.

Another immigration spokesman said the issue would be dealt with by authorities in Ottawa and a decision could take up to six months.

He said it is not common for Russians sailors to defect, but added 17 Polish sailors visiting B.C. ports have sought asylum in the last six months.

Punxsutawney Phil saw his shadow — in the spot lights

Long winter unclear

Underground News Services

PUNXSUTAWNEY, Pa. — Punxsutawney Phil, Pennsylvania's famous groundhog, saw his shadow today and thus predicted six more weeks of winter.

But he was the only one in North America to bestir himself in a bid to confound the meteorologists.

The fat and furry creature was prodded from his sanctum at 7:29 a.m. and after a moment of sleepy-eyed confusion conferred with members of the Punxsutawney Groundhog Club at his home on Gobbler's Knob. About 1,500 people turned out for the annual affair.

Punxsutawney owes whatever reputation the town has to Phil's annual appearances, of which this year's was the 93rd.

However, in Marion, Ohio, a challenger to Phil's throne — Buckeye Chuck — slept in as a freezing, overcast dawn arrived, which was interpreted as spring being just around the corner.

In West Orange, N.J., Chuck, a female forecaster, came out of her burrow for a scant 15 seconds at the Turtle Back Zoo and decided there would be an early spring.

And in New York, it was too cold this morning for Flushing Park zoo's Pothole Pete so he decided to sleep through it and leave the weather forecasting to others.

Canada plans retaliation

Times News Services

OTTAWA — The federal government will retaliate against the Soviet Union for the expulsion of Canada's senior military attache in Moscow, Col. Harold Gold, an external affairs department spokesman said Friday.

Gold, who is from Victoria, has been ordered out of Moscow just 10 days after three Soviet military officers were accused of spying and ordered out of Canada by External Affairs Minister Flora MacDonald.

Gold was also accused of spying, informed sources said today in Moscow.

The sources said Gold will be leaving within the next two or three days. He was given a week to leave.

The spokesman said Ottawa was planning to retaliate and the government was now considering how this should be done.

Miss MacDonald had promised to retaliate if the Russians responded to the recent expulsion of Soviet officials by ordering Canadian diplomats to leave the Soviet Union.

Canadian diplomats are not engaged in spying, she said.

This Russian move further chills Soviet-Canadian relations which have cooled sharply since the Soviet invaded Afghanistan.

Prime Minister Clark has announced restrictions on trade with Russia and called for a boycott of the Moscow Olympic Games to protest the Soviet invasion.

New Zealand has also recently expelled the Soviet ambassador to New Zealand and a major Soviet spy case has just erupted in Japan.

Gold, a native of Victoria, was posted to Moscow last August. He was previously in defence department headquarters in Ottawa.

Moscow sources said Canada regarded the charges against the colonel, who

Incompetence charge in ferry row

By CHARLES LA VERTU
The Canadian Press

The Crown-owned B.C. Steamship Corp. has lost a four-year naval battle with the B.C. Ferry Corp., another government-owned firm, over a replacement for the aging Princess Marguerite — and its chief executive officer is furious.

Arthur Elworthy, BCSC president and general manager, said in a Jan. 16 letter marked confidential and obtained by The Canadian Press Friday that ferry corporation general manager Charles Gallagher is not acting in the public interest.

Elworthy says his corporation, which has operated the Princess Marguerite between Seattle and Victoria since 1975, had been promised the Queen of Surrey in 1976 as a replacement vessel.

"Since that time, every minister who has been connected with the ship, plus the board of directors, have recognized this and are unanimous in this regard," the letter addressed to the cabinet committee said.

The cabinet committee announced Thursday the Queen of Surrey would replace the Queen of Prince Rupert on the B.C. Ferry Corp.'s Vancouver Island-Prince Rupert run.

The Prince Rupert then would be leased to the B.C. Steamship Corp. for the Seattle-Victoria run, the committee decided.

The Queen of Surrey, formerly the MS Stena Danica, was purchased by the previous NDP government in 1974 for $17.7 million to ease "the crisis in Vancouver Island-Mainland transportation" while other ships were being built.

Elworthy says that Gallagher has fought to keep the Queen of Surrey "with some kind of an obsession."

"His moves have been thoroughly incompetent. Two years ago he told us we couldn't have the ship because he was going to sell it. He has deceived his board of directors and his minister and, of course, the premier."

The letter says the new run from Port Hardy to Prince Rupert, which begins this year replacing the Kelsey Bay-Prince Rupert run, "is so ill-conceived that it will be rejected by the travelling public."

"I think you will realize that the new concept with the length of the run and the inadequate accommodation for the travelling public will result in its rejection."

Elworthy said the Marguerite brought 180,000 people to Victoria who spent an estimated $20 million, and while it has a debt of $4 million, is not costing the taxpayers anything having made a profit of $250,000 last year after servicing the debt.

The letter notes that since July, at the request of Industry Minister Don Phillips "we have been searching the world for a ship that might suit the Seattle-Victoria route."
